

POLISH FLIERS AFTER RECORD

Stratosphere Flight Set in September

Largest Balloon Made Is Expected to Go Up 81,000 Feet

The next manned-balloon flight into the stratosphere will be made by Polish aviators and scientists, from Poland, in September, in the largest balloon ever constructed, it was announced this week by the National Geographic society after a conference with members of the Polish embassy staff. The pilot will be Captain Zbigniew Burzynski of the Polish army, who has just sailed for Poland after a brief visit to the United States during which he consulted with Major Albert W. Stevens who commanded the world-record stratosphere flight of the National Geographic society and the United States army air corps in 1935, and specialists of the national bureau of standards who designed some of the instruments used in the 1935 ascent.

The Polish flight will be notable in several respects. The balloon, which is almost completed, will be considerably larger than Explorer II of the Geographic-army flight and will be made of vulcanized silk. Silk for the bag was both grown and processed in Poland, product of an industry not generally known to exist in that country. The volume of the bag will be more than 4,800,000 cubic feet as against 3,700,000 cubic feet for Explorer II; the height at take-off time, 259 feet as against 315 feet; and the greatest diameter 209 feet as against 192 feet. In spite of this greater size, the bag will weigh only 3,300 pounds instead of the 6,350 pounds of Explorer II, owing to the lesser weight per square yard of the silk fabric.

The spherical gondola to be used in the Polish flight will be made of aluminum and steel. With instruments and ballast installed, it will weigh much less than the similarly equipped gondola of Explorer II.

Balloon and gondola together, ready for flight, will weigh less than half as much of Explorer II, so that it should reach a much greater height, probably 81,000 feet (15 1/2 miles) above sea level. Explorer II established the present world altitude record of 72,395 feet (approximately 13 3/4 miles), in an ascent from the Black Hills, near Rapid City, South Dakota, November 11, 1935.

Captain Burzynski will be accompanied on the forthcoming flight by Captain F. R. Hynes, also of the Polish army, and Dr. Yodko Narkiewicz, noted alpinist and explorer. The two officers are well known to American balloonists. They were the usual Geographic society which were used in the flight of Explorer II in 1935. Funds for the flight, amounting to a million zlotys, (nearly $200,000) were raised by popular subscription and the ascent is being made under the auspices of the Polish army.

Since the flight of Explorer II on November 11, 1935, three attempts have been made to penetrate the stratosphere. In March 9, 1936, two Russian scientists, ascending from Moscow, reached an altitude of 10,000 meters (about 32,808 feet) in a balloon of only 17,000 cubic feet capacity.

On May 25, 1937, at Beaumont, Texas, August Piccard's balloon, caught fire from a gas burner used to heat air for lifting the balloon, as the ground crew were attaching the basket for the ascent of Piccard and Max Cosyns.

On July 18, 1937, Professor Jean Piccard took off at Rochester, Minnesota, in a gondola lifted by a group of small balloons, and six hours later, crashed into the treetops near Lansing, Iowa. He attained a height of 11,000 feet.

(Continued from page one) crew sent in from CCC camp Odell lake quickly checked the fire and early today not even a smoke was visible. The control unit was to return to camp today, its suppression task successfully accomplished.

An airplane had been ordered from Klamath Falls to carry observers over the Twp. fire yesterday afternoon, but one plane was damaged as it was being wheeled out of the hangar, and a second was grounded by motor trouble near Modoc point. Williams' smaller plane was then pressed into service. Forest officials said that Williams' target work in dropping supplies was excellent.

Portland Ore., July 21 (AP)—Portlanders wilted under another scorching temperature today, with prospects that the day's maximum would exceed yesterday's record-breaking 101 degrees.

The weather bureau said it was "almost 99" at 2 p. m. The minimum this morning was seven degrees hotter than it was yesterday.

Salem, Ore., July 21 (AP)—The hottest day in three years was recorded here Wednesday when the temperature climbed to 104.2 at the airport. Hottest day ever recorded here was 108, a record set in 1927.

Downtown thermometers went to the 110 mark yesterday, but the readings were unofficial. Weather bureau observers predicted another record for the third year.

109 AT THE DALLES
The Dalles, Ore., July 21 (AP)—Heat records here for the last decade seemed destined to be broken this afternoon, when the mercury climbed to 106 at 3 o'clock. The Dalles airport, on the Washington side of the Columbia river, reported an official reading of 110.2 at 3 o'clock.

City Hopes to Start Building Work Soon

The commission authorized first steps in the relocation of the Century drive approach on Galveston avenue and West 14th streets. The highway department, which plans to surface the street this summer, will eliminate two curves by running the route south on West 14th instead of turning west and then south as at present. Some changes in the grade of the street are involved, and the city's formalities must be complied with.

HOCKLEY ASKS SPEED

Portland, Ore., July 21 (AP)—C. C. Hockley, regional director of the public works administration, today urged cities and towns in the northwest to file applications quickly if they want to participate in the 1938 PWA program.

He said applications must be filed not later than Sept. 30. Work must be started before Jan. 1, 1939 and subsequently completed by June 30, 1940.

"The PWA is not offering something for nothing," Hockley said. "It is merely trying to anticipate the construction needs of the northwest and other sections of the country over a period of three to five years by offering grants and loans to enable responsible public parties to undertake construction projects now while employment is at a low ebb.

The director said applications for grants and loans are being reviewed at the regional office here at the rate of 30 a week. Allotments for 129 projects in this region have been approved since the PWA appropriation act was signed by President Roosevelt. They include grants and loans totaling $11,000,000 for construction in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Alaska which will cost about $23,000,000.

William H. Entrikin Dies in Kansas Today

Wayne Entrikin of Bend and George Entrikin of Cedro-Wesley, Wash., left today for Alhambra, Kansas, where their father, William H. Entrikin, died this morning. Mr. Entrikin, whose wife died just five months ago, had visited Bend several times and had many friends here. Another son, Charles Entrikin, is a resident of Bend.

Funeral services will be held Sunday, Mr. Entrikin's 76th birthday, according to present plans.
