

SPRAGUE STANDS BY CONVICTIONS

Governor's Policies Are Becoming Known

By George E. Jones
(Bend News Staff Correspondent)
Salem, Ore., April 13 (AP)—Gov. Charles A. Sprague has completed two months in the executive chair and today his friends and enemies were in a position to draw definite conclusions as to his political personality.

Only last January 9 he took the oath of office before a joint assembly of the legislature as Charles H. Martin, wily bucking ex-Indian fighter, departed into private life.

Sprague's inaugural address did not furnish political observers with the policy clues they hoped for. It was delivered quietly and with careful choice of words.

Since that time, however, Sprague has been embroiled in political issues deeply affecting the fabric of the state. Sixteen veto messages and one or two other pronouncements have etched more sharply the political side of a man who entered politics last year with all the inexperience and guilelessness of Alice in Wonderland.

He has today more enemies than a moth's tag. Some of his vetoes cut into the pride and political ambitions of several senators, and once or twice he invited the disapproval of powerful groups.

More than anything else, his executive pronouncements have revealed an unyielding quality behind the silk glove of carefully-chosen words.

His political record to date, however, precludes a colorful career such as Martin's. He continues to speak and write like the editor he was before election.

Sprague does not have the blunt, homely metaphors of the army man, Martin. His messages were long, detailed and exact.

Only on occasions does he break forth with a bit of dry humor—such as the time when he vetoed the firemen's pension bill:

"What class of well-feathered geese may other groups pluck?" (referring to the proposed tax on insurance premiums for payment of pensions.)

On another occasion he vetoed the bill restricting use of salmon eggs on the upper river. The bill, he said, was "only another burden to the average fisherman and added future fishermen might have to serve in-ternships in WPA casting ponds."

Their Elopement No Surprise

Recently they were Carole Lombard and Clark Gable. Now they're Mr. and Mrs. Clark Gable—and they're a long time.

He is inclined to view with suspicion any measure he regards as discriminatory—as illustrated by his resounding vetoes of bills imposing restrictions on bar pilots and regulating closely the practice of optometry.

He is a staunch opponent of restrictive practices by boards and commissions. Through his efforts the bakery board was abolished. The milk board may be next.

His sense of personal property rights is strong and generally his vetoes reflected a viewpoint leaning toward "rugged individualism"—although he has not emphasized his opposition toward the new deal.

On economy, he has vetoed several appropriations, pushed through the legislature. He also filed, without signature, several county salary-

ISLAND REFUGE IS OFFERED JEWS

Dominican Republic Seeks New Citizens

Ciudad Trujillo, D. R. (AP)—The Dominican republic is bringing to completion a plan whereby up to 100,000 homeless refugees from Europe can be assimilated in the vast, fertile though undeveloped agricultural regions of the island.

The plan has the approval of refugee leaders of the United States and will be announced, in all probability, this year when Generalissimo Rafael L. Trujillo visits the United States to confer with the state department and to perfect details with representatives of international refugee groups.

The Dominican republic, although larger than Belgium—it is approximately the size of Portugal—has only 1,600,000 inhabitants. The neighboring country of Haiti with half its area, has twice the population. The republic finds that more than half of its fertile, untitled land suitable for crop production.

Rural Growth Stressed
The refugee plan is predicated upon the belief that the Dominican republic must grow in its rural centers, rather than in its urban districts. Hence this projected plan for refugee settlement discourages those who would settle in its score or more of larger cities. In fact, it offers concessions to those who will agree to promise to settle in virgin territory.

Rich, loamy topsoil extending down a dozen feet or more, with a dry, warm climate make the island particularly well adapted to the cultivation of sugar cane (its major crop), tobacco, coffee, coconuts, rice, bananas, Indian corn, potatoes, beans, onions, peanuts, pineapples, oranges, lemons, cotton and precious woods. It likewise is rich in mineral resources of gold, iron and copper.

Concessions to Be Offered
It is from the exploitation of these products that the government hopes to reap its return for making the island a haven for refugees. To induce refugees to settle there, the Dominican government will, it is understood, offer these concessions:

1—Waiver of the $500 entry fee required of all Jews settling there if they agree to engage in agriculture.
2—Providing of free farm lands to settlers with the guarantee of a ready, stable market for their products at the prevailing prices.
3—Providing of farm homes and living accommodations for the refugees while these are being built.

EUGENE AWAITS DATA ON RATES

Bonneville Representative Fails to Appear

Eugene, April 13—While Bonneville authorities were building transmission lines to Eugene and letting contracts for a substation, Eugene water board members still awaited a contract for purchasing Bonneville power today as the Bonneville representative again failed to appear at the April board meeting with a schedule of rates.

For more than two months the Eugene board has been negotiating with Bonneville authorities regarding a rate schedule and a contract for the purchase of peak load power. The death of J. D. Ross, Bonneville administrator, is said to have held up details of the work and so far, even though Bonneville is getting ready to send its power to Eugene, Eugene has not signed up to buy any.

The rate of $17.50 per kilowatt year offered by Bonneville would be too expensive for Eugene on a peak load basis, Superintendent J. W. McArthur explained. Purchasing power only during those times when the local plants were working to capacity, the city would require a lower rate, and with that in view negotiations have been under way to arrive at a rate satisfactory to Eugene. It is expected the schedule will be submitted in the near future.

Another Conference Likely
After extended discussion, Houston returned to the United States to report tentative approval of the plan. It is expected that he will confer with Trujillo during the latter's projected visit to Washington this summer.

Although figures are not available, Jewish migration to this island where Christopher Columbus made his first visit to the new world, has not been extensive during the past few years. The $500 entry fee has been in many cases prohibitive.

Waiver of this fee, plus the eagerness of the government to aid in the settlement of these homeless on farms, is confidently expected to increase the foreign infiltration once the plan is accepted. Additional financing by groups interested in the refugee problem is held to be an added incentive to those who have no homes and do not know where to go.

Judges For Debate on Friday Are Announced

Judges for the eastern Oregon championship debate, to be held here tomorrow between Pendleton and Bonanza, were announced today from the Bend high school. They will be Paul Hampson, Walter G. Peak and the Rev. R. H. Prentice, all of Bend.

The debate, winner of which will go into the state finals, will be in the high school library and will start at 3:30 o'clock. Original plans were to hold the debate in room No. 306.

The public has been invited to attend. Norman Rudd, former member of the Bend high school faculty, is coach of the Pendleton team.
