

Elks Revise Lineup in Preparation for Burns Game Here Sunday

Harney Nine Is Reported Strong Elks Field Work Now Moving Faster

Preparing for their game against Burns here Sunday, the Bend Elks look part in a final practice yesterday evening and displayed far better form than that shown last Sunday when they fell before the Klamath Red Sox, 8 to 3. Good weather for practice sessions materially helped the Elks this week. Furthermore, several changes in lineup have been made and these changes have apparently improved the effectiveness of the team.

Reports from the Harney country indicate that Burns has a very strong team this season. The Harney players will come here confident that they can score a victory over the state league nine.

Work on the Elks' ball park is progressing nicely and in inclosed field will soon be available. The Elks will open their state league season here on May 8, against the Marine electric nine of Portland.

Manager Clyde Stokoe has announced that the Bend squad was cut to "war strength" following last night's practice. Pitchers remaining on the squad are Bob Houtchens, Jim Farmer, Bill Hatch and Harold Barfknecht. Tommy Hawkins remains as catcher. John Houck is on first base, alternating with Hatch. On second base is Wally Kremer. However, Kremer is really a catcher, having worked behind bat for the Edwards Furniture nine last season in games against Bend. Kremer finished the season with Yakima, in the Western International league.

Harlow Burton, one of the few returning members of last year's squad, is holding down shortstop this year. Harold Reid is on third base. Members of the outfield squad are Joe Decker, Murel Nehl, Bob Roberts and Bill Mayer.

It was announced by Stokoe today that there is a chance that John Bubalo will rejoin the Elks for the 1939 season. Bubalo has been offered a job in Silverton to play with the Silverton team, but if a place can be found for the outfield star in Bend he will come here.

The Elks squad has been cut to enable the players to get more practice, inasmuch as the opening of the state league season is not far distant.

The Elks are sorely missing the services of George Walker, who is making a fine showing with Lewiston in the Pioneer league, and Verne Reynolds, who has signed with Spokane in the Western International league. Wally Graser, injured in an automobile accident, is also greatly missed by the Elks. If Graser had been able to play this season he would have signed with Spokane.

PACIFIC COAST LEAGUE
(By United Press)

Los Angeles was within one game today of tying the Pacific Coast league record of 19 straight victories by Seattle in 1933.

The Angels chalked up their 18th win as they slammed four San Diego pitchers for 13 hits and a 9-5 win.

Homers by Jigger Stutz, rookie Lou Stringer and Rip Collins and a six-run rally in the third innings gave the Angels their victory.

In other coast league games, Portland defeated Oakland, 9-3; Sacramento walloped San Francisco, 17-2, and Hollywood shut out Seattle, 6-0.

Portland collected 15 hits off a parade of Oakland pitchers including Selveson, Tietje, Sheehan, Priest and Buxton. Radonits and Douglas gave the Oaks nine safeties.

Sacramento ran wild in the latter innings of its game with San Francisco. With a lead of 6-2 going into the seventh, the Solons banged in four more, added two in the eighth and finished off the final canto with five more.

In the Seattle-Hollywood game, Wayne Osborne let the Rangers down with six hits in what was a pitching duel with Webber until the sixth. Neither team had scored until Spencer Harris booted out his second homer in two games.

A new lightweight, folding anchor made of monel metal has been devised.

(United Press Staff Correspondent)
New York, April 21 (UP)—If I were a carpenter, and out of work, I would go to the Yankee stadium and apply for the job of building the extra bleachers for the 1939 world series.

Because the Yankees are in. The National league may have a helluva time determining the victor to be sacrificed in late September, but there is no doubt in the American league. The fight is strictly confined to second place. It may be the Red Sox, it may be Detroit, or it may be the irrepressible Cleveland, but first place belongs to the Yankees.

They proved that yesterday in their opener. Faced by the Red Sox, the only club that is given a chance to beat them, the Yanks won 2 to 0. It was a quiet, easy victory. With Ruffing (Red) doing the pitching (and try and name me someone who can do it better than the three-toed man from Illinois) the Yanks just breezed. Funny thing about the Yankees—they win as they have to. If their pitching is bad, they take a firmer grip on their bats and slug their way through. If their pitching is good they sort of relax, and get just enough base knocks to win. Look up your scores of last year. They'll average something like 10 to 8 or 4 to 2. The Yanks are obliging. They'll either hit with you or pitch with you. They don't care, just so they win.

To say that any club will bother them is ridiculous. To bet that any team will be to play the narrow percentage that bubonic plague will hit the champions, or that three or four of their men will be removed from combat by accident. Man for man no team in the majors belongs on the same field with the Yanks.

Take the life line of the team—that axis that starts with the catcher and ends with the centerfielder. All the Yanks have in that shot through the middle is Bill Dickey, Red Ruffing, Joe Gordon, and Joe DiMaggio. In short, the best catcher, the best pitcher, the best second baseman, and the best outfielder. I'll even go farther than that in describing DiMaggio. He is the best man in baseball today.

He has two catches yesterday that no other outfielder in the league could have made. And—this is important—he made this look easy. The first one was a shoestring catch, and Joe took it on the dead run, without a stumble or a play to the crowd. The other was a long fly, on an arc over his head. He brought it down with the ease of a union leaguer looking at his watch.

Dickely was off to a bad start. All he could do was to get all their was out of Ruffing, and blast a home run and a double. The best that Ruffing could do, with a chill wind whipping about, was to shut out the Sox.

Report on Gehrig: He looked pretty bad. True, he took the same old cut at the ball at bat, but in the field he was slower than almost any man you ever saw. The long grind has got him. He'll stay on first, however, as long as the Yanks can win with him. The minute they start losing with him he'll be replaced by Henrich. My guess is that he will be on first all year, because the Yanks are good enough to carry him along. After all, they carried him most of last year. It wasn't until late in the season, when the flag was won, that Lou hit enough to bring his average up around the .300 class.

Any way, the Yanks are in, and if you bet on them in the future book go right ahead and spend your profit. They are in the same class with death and taxes when it comes to sure things.

MAJOR LEAGUES
New York, April 21 (UP)—With attendance lagging considerably behind last year, the major leagues hoped for better weather today and for a sharp upturn at the turnstiles.

Only 10 games have been played in four days because of rain and cold weather. Total attendance thus far is 183,382, far below expectations. The largest opening crowd was 47,000 for the Tigers-White Sox game at Detroit. The smallest was 1,952 for a morning game between the Phils and Bees at Boston.

Three teams have yet to play their first games—the Indians and Browns in the American league and the Cubs in the National league.

Balked three times by the weather, the New York Yankees got away yesterday and polished off their most dangerous rivals, the Boston Red Sox, 2-0, before a surprisingly small crowd of 30,278 at Yankee stadium. Red Ruffing outdistanced Letty Grove in a pitchers' battle in which each allowed only seven hits. Bill Dickey's homer and Jake Powell's triple which scored Rolfe accounted for the Yanks' two runs.

Thunder rolled off Hank Greenberg's bat in the 14th inning and the Detroit Tigers subdued the Chicago White Sox, 8-7. Greenberg, who hit 58 homers last year, rattled No. 1 of 1939 off Thornton Lee. He also hit a triple and a single. Barney McCoskey, Tigers' rookie centerfielder, led Detroit's 19-hit attack with four blows, two of them doubles.

George Caster, allowing only four hits, pitched the Philadelphia Athletics to a 2-0 shutout over Washington before a small opening day crowd of 7,100 at Shibe park. Earl Brucker, A's catcher, drove in one run with a double and scored the other one.

"Hot Potato" Luke Hamlin, afflicted with a siege of boils which may shelve him at any time, cooled off the New York Giants at Brooklyn evened the series with a 5-3 win. He allowed only seven hits. Hal Schumacher was driven out of the box with a 3-run attack in the sixth.

Lou Fette, Boston Bees' veteran, pitched a brilliant 3-hit shutout in beating the Phillies, 2-0.

DESERT FISHERMAN AT LAST REWARDED

Catches Three Salmon in 30-Minute Period

Ending a quarter of a century of effort, John H. Buchholz, Bend resident who calls himself a "high desert fisherman," caught his first salmon this week, then landed two more to secure a total of 61 pounds of fish in 30 minutes. Practically all of Buchholz' 25 years of salmon fishing effort was confined to the Willamette river, and it was in that stream that he finally got his fish.

With a friend from Portland, Buchholz fished below the St. Johns bridge for 2 1/2 days on his most recent try for salmon. On the third day, just as the St. Johns mill whistles were sounding the noon hour, the Bend man caught a 24 pound salmon.

The fishermen got the big fish in their boat, rounded back to position and Buchholz again dropped his line into the stream—and again he pulled out a salmon, this time a 22 pounder. Other anglers gathered around as the "high desert fisherman" landed his second fish, then watched as he dropped his line into the same place and hooked the third.

Buchholz' third salmon weighed 15 pounds. He looked at his watch as he rested and noted that the three had been landed in just half an hour—after 25 years of trying.
