Range; 18th Century
Styles Popular

Never before have the furnishings for the American home been so colorful, so interesting and so varied as they are today, and when the home furnisher faces forth on her buying tour this fall she will, if observant, pay special homage to designers who seek cheer, as well as beauty in the home. Such is the belief of the personnel of the Square Deal Furniture Co. of Bend, headed by H. G. Rainey, long in the furniture business here and closely in touch with the needs of the Central Oregon country.

Colors for fall reign in deep blues, burgundy and turquoise, with contrast of bright gold and dusty rose in upholstered living room furniture. But, of course, these color trends are not so definite as to be dictatorial and the home furnisher will be free to select what she pleases and still be certain that her taste is good.

Old Styles Liked
And as for styles, they may come and go, but for many home makers 18th century furniture will remain the perennial favorite. This appears especially true this fall. Based on designs of 150 years ago, this type reflects an era of large estates, fine houses and gracious living—and yet, because its lines are so fundamentally sound, it is conservative and elegant today.

Draperies are of bright, cheerful colors this fall, the Square Deal staff reports. These colors are artfully prepared for contrast or comparison.

Carpets are to be of rich warm colors of taupe, rust, burgundy, browns and greens. The pattern of carpets is returning to quaint floral and leaf designs.

Elaborate bedroom furniture reigns as a favorite, although walnut and the darker woods remain very prominent in the well dressed home.

Linoleum Important
Marbled and plain linoleum with feature strips, borders and insets remain at the top of the list of favorite styles for the kitchen and for the bath. Frilly, delicate shade curtains used with these marbled linoleum designs prove to be desirable.

Venetian blinds in white and in colors dress any room to perfection.

Occasional furniture—the small pieces—give life and interest to the room. An occasional piece isn't a poor relation and shouldn't be treated as such. It should have the same social standing as the large pieces, which are, after all, only the skeleton of the room.

The home furnisher is advised to give her room shape and form with large pieces, but to use occasional pieces to fill in the details and round out its proportions. Furnish a room with sofas, chairs and chests and it will look bare. Tables are needed, not only to make it liveable, but to make it whole.

Features Two Sweaters

JOAN BENNETT, a star of "The Man in the Iron Mask", wears this smart sports outfit which includes white flannel skirt, two sweaters and a knitted sports hat. The under-sweater is of softest white angora, while the top one is of coarser knitted wool with red, white and blue edgings.

A lonely sofa should be blanketed by two tilt tables or lamp stands. Wall space at the side of a door won't look so naked if a commode is placed there, with a mirror above it.

The Square Deal management, buying on a favorable market early in the season, made heavy purchases for the Bend store. These purchases, featuring fall and winter stock, are arriving daily from some of the country's largest manufacturing centers.

CHANGES ARE SEEN IN AUTUMN STYLES

Back Fullness Is Found in Gores, Pleats

The newest silhouette for dresses has been changing "behind one's back." Mrs. L. A. Phelps of the Silhouette Dress shop pointed out while discussing fall fashions. Back fullness is found in gores, pleats, and bustles to make the wearer's waist look smaller. Wrist length sleeves are growing in importance, with bracelet lengths as the compromise, and above the elbow lengths used more for frocks with jackets. The skirt continues to swing.

Cloth coats are stronger this season in box and straight lines. Black leads by 80 percent, but plum, green, and blue are important. Persian lamb and fox are the favorite furs for trimming coats, and flat furs are used on small collars and the front trim of pockets and cuffs. Wear the hat that suits you, is Mrs. Phelps' suggestion, for there is a great variety. Back trimmings are important in hats as well as dresses. Accessories make the simple costume—big, important-looking gold necklaces are for black and new greens, blues, and browns. In matching colors use coordination for handbags and gloves, Mrs. Phelps adds.

An electrical sound analyzer is being used to study the complex qualities in a violin's tones, including differences so slight the ear cannot detect them.
