Bond Market Mixed, Wheat Higher

Rise Held Until Close as Heavy Industry Group Leads Market

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

Stocks higher, U. S. governments lower.
Curb stocks higher.
Foreign exchange strong.
Cotton about steady.
Wheat up 1 1/2-1 3/4 cents; corn up 1/2-1 1/4.
Rubber up more than 1/4 cent a pound.
Silver up 1/4 cent in New York to 38 3/4 cents a fine ounce.

New York, Sept. 21 (AP)—Stocks advanced fractions to 5 points in moderately active trading today, while bonds were mixed with 18 U. S. governments at new lows, and wheat and wheat futures up 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 cents a bushel.
Trading quieted early in the session and there was some irregularity as some traders withdrew pending action by congress on neutrality. Before noon, however, the market was in another uptrend and it held gains well to the close. Trading picked up in the afternoon dealings.

The industrial average was within less than 2 points of its high for the year and the utility average made a small gain. Best gains in the industrial division were in the heavy industry group, notably the railroad equipments which responded to railroad orders and prospects of war business in armament output.

New highs were made by American Car and Foundry, American Brake Shoe, Baldwin, General Electric, American Transportation, New York Air Brake, Pressed Steel Car, Pullman, and Westinghouse Air Brake.

Case gained 5 points and International Harvester nearly 3 points. Heavy machinery issues were good gainers. The steel made sharp recoveries from early lows and at their highs they had advances ranging to more than 2 points.

Most non-ferrous metal issues were firm. Douglas at its high was up 2 points. Westinghouse Electric was up 2 1/4. Chemicals had advances ranging to 2 points.

Kendall preferred spurted 8 1/2 to a new high of 99. Marshall Field, Consolidated Aircraft and National Mail-Leable and Steel Castings made new tops.

Chrysler and General Motors were firm. Electric Auto-Lite was up more than a point. Rubbers had small advances.

The market quieted before the close and moderate profit-taking reduced prices from the highs. Railroad issues were strong to the close.

Dow Jones closing stock averages: Industrial 153.48, up 1.23; rail 32.83 up 0.38; utility 24.65, up 0.23.
Stock sales approximated 1,730,000 shares against 2,140,000 yesterday. Curb stock sales were 225,000 shares against 275,000 in the previous session.

OREGON STATE TO TRAIN 30 PILOTS

Applications For Aviation Corps Are Received

Oregon State College—Some 30 students here will be able to receive training as airplane pilots largely at the expense of the government, as the result of the approval by the civil aeronautics authority of this institution as one of the 106 in the country where training for civil pilots will be sponsored. Applications are being taken for this work from students who will have at least sophomore standing. They will get flying training along with their other college work.

The total cost to the student in addition to normal college expenses will be $40, which goes to the institution to pay for a comprehensive physical examination, insurance, and other incidental expenses. The civil aeronautics authority adds $20 per student as its contribution to the cost of conducting a ground school by the institution, and then meets the entire cost of actual flying instruction.

The ground school, consisting of 72 hours of training scattered throughout the year, will begin about October 1, according to Ben F. Ruffner, associate professor of aeronautical engineering, who is in active charge of the course here. Planes used in flight work will be kept at the Albany airport, at least pending the development of suitable airport facilities at Corvallis.

Marketing Research Established at OSC

A new cooperative research project, directed toward assisting agricultural marketing agencies with their financing problems, has just been established at the agricultural experiment station at Oregon State College. On this project Oregon station personnel will work with the farm credit administration on detailed studies relating to the financing of marketing agencies with particular reference to canneries and other food processing plants.

Chief representative of the experiment station on the project will be Dr. D. B. DeLoach, whose transfer from the instructional division to agricultural research was approved by the state board of higher education at its recent meeting. Working with Dr. DeLoach will be N. Fogelberg, senior agricultural economist in the cooperative research and service division of the farm credit administration, who has been assigned temporarily from Washington, D. C.

A third man on the project will be C. W. Peters, who recently completed graduate work in agricultural economics at the state college.

MIDSTATE SERVED BY STAGE LINES

Mt. Hood Organization Centers in Bend

During the past year, the Mount Hood Stages, a locally owned firm with headquarters and shops in Bend, provided safe transportation for 105,000 passengers, of which about 15 per cent originated in Central Oregon. To provide this service, the firm maintained 23 buses.

Not only has the stage system provided transportation for more than 100,000 people visiting many parts of the Pacific northwest, but it has played a major role in opening the interior country of Oregon to tourists. This past season, it has been learned from officials of the system, people moved over Central Oregon routes on modern buses from such points as Butte, Spokane and many Canadian cities, en route to California. Early this year, fares were equalized between California and points north of Bend, including Portland, Seattle and Vancouver, B. C.

This was a factor in the marked increase of interstate traffic. The interior route into California is expected to further increase in popularity on the completion of the Warm-springs cutoff.

Prior to the start of operation by the Mount Hood Stages, Central Oregon was served by a number of stage companies, including Northland Greyhound, Pickwick Greyhound, Union Pacific stages and Columbia Gorge stages, and also by smaller operators. One by one, these companies ceased to function, finding it difficult to operate at a profit, although fares were much higher than at present.

By coordinating the various routes formerly served by different systems and establishing shops and headquarters in Bend, rather than at some distant point, the Mount Hood Stages has expanded into one of the big systems of the northwest and now operates more than a million and a quarter miles a year. The system is the largest user of gasoline in Central Oregon.

The management attributes part of its success to the fact that modern equipment, including the new and specially designed highway "Climbs", are used on the various runs. These "Climbs", built in the northwest, offer a new rear engine design that has lessened noise and entirely eliminated gas and oil fumes. Maximum safety has been secured by all metal bodies and safety glass. Seats have been modernized to give the utmost in comfort. A new lighting system and color scheme provides a restful interior. An improved ventilating system provides fresh air throughout the coach at all times, without draft.

The general decision of Oregon farmers is in line with the ideas expressed in other western as well as mid-western states, said N. E. Dodd of Haines, director of the western AAA division, who was principal speaker. He said that wheat growers are generally agreed that present huge surpluses make immediate acreage expansion risky.

GATOR LOOSE: POLICE CALLED
Gaffney, S. C. (AP)—City policemen admit they perform many unusual duties in their work, but the best yet was when they answered a call to arrest a live alligator. The alligator, a pet, had escaped his pen and was loose in the street. Police, with the help of firemen, got the job done.

Animal Industry in Oregon Is Expanding

"There are many who believe that Oregon's agricultural future for the next several decades rests squarely upon the further development of the animal industries based upon a significant and necessary land-use adjustment," said P. M. Brandt, chief in animal industries at O. S. C., in discussing this question recently over KOAC.

"Taking everything into consideration, it would appear that the animal industry of Oregon, including chickens, turkeys and fur farms as well as other domestic animals, is on a pretty sound basis. It is pretty well balanced up with the feed supply but looking forward to expansion as rapidly as land-use adjustment can be made to permit profitable production in increasing numbers."

O. S. C. has just issued a circular listing 30 state and 80 federal bulletins pertaining to various phases of dairy husbandry.

Oregon Wheat Growers Favor Normal Acreage

Flourished wheat markets due to war conditions are not expected to bring a general increase in winter wheat acreage in Oregon, according to the consensus of representative growers who attended a state-wide conference at Pendleton last week.

Approximately 300 farmers and farm leaders attended the meeting, with discussion centering on advisability of expanding wheat acreages because of possible price increases due to war conditions.

This week, Oregon wheat growers are holding meetings on a county basis, giving further thought to the advisability of expansion.

Representatives of 11 principal wheat counties reported at Pendleton what they expected most of their farmers will stay by their AAA wheat allotments in planting winter wheat. A survey of the situation in the spring may determine whether an increase is warranted at that time, it was said.

The general decision of Oregon farmers is in line with the ideas expressed in other western as well as mid-western states, said N. E. Dodd of Haines, director of the western AAA division, who was principal speaker. He said that wheat growers are generally agreed that present huge surpluses make immediate acreage expansion risky.

TOMATOES RICH VITAMIN SOURCE

Almost Span Alphabet of Dietary Needs

If you're a vitamin fan get more tomatoes to can.

This is the suggestion of Miss Lucy A. Case, extension nutrition specialist at O. S. C. who calls attention to the fact that the tomato almost spans the vitamin alphabet.

One medium-sized ripe tomato will furnish about half a day's requirement for vitamin C (ascorbic acid) and about one-fifth of the vitamin A needs for the day. In addition it will contribute some vitamin B, vitamin G, and pellagra arrestive vitamin.

A supreme court decision back in 1893 held that a tomato is a vegetable, even though botanically it is a fruit. Regardless of that, it is dietetically one of the cheapest and best sources of food rich in vitamins.
