

BAND DECIDES TO DISSOLVE

Lack of Players and Funds Reasons

Municipal Organization Organized in 1930

The Bend Municipal band, an organization of local musicians with a history that reaches back some 25 years, has been disbanded. It has been announced by Carl J. Lindh, president. Formal action dissolving the band was taken at the regular meeting of the musicians on Thursday night.

History of the local band goes back to about 1916, when employees of The Shevlin-Hixon Company plant formed an organization that was maintained through contributions. The Shevlin-Hixon band suspended activities after about 10 years of service in the Bend community. For several years, Bend was without a band, then in 1930 the Bend Municipal band, composed of a number of Shevlin-Hixon musicians and a considerable amount of new talent, came into existence, with Carl J. Lindh, as president.

Lindh remained president of the Bend Municipal band during its existence. During the first year of its existence, the Bend Municipal band was maintained through contributions of merchants. Later, the problem of financing the band became more and more difficult. Finally, a year ago, the city made $1,200 available, with the understanding that the band would provide music for the Fourth of July celebrations. In 1940, the contribution was reduced to $800, and half of this was used for the Fourth of July. It soon became evident that the band could not operate on funds available. This year, no appropriation for the band was included in the 1941 budget. The band also faced other problems, especially the loss of a number of outstanding soloists, including Jim Conklin and Kenneth Sawyer, who are going to college. Interest in band activity rapidly dropped, as it became evident that financial support would be lacking. Only 14 reported for this week's rehearsal.

Officers of the band did not appear before the budget board this year to ask for appropriation, the band members feeling that it should not be up to them to take the initiative in this matter. Another reason why the band refused to take the initiative in seeking funds for the continuance of the organization was the realization that there is a definite necessity to pare budgets in these times of rapidly mounting taxes, with prospects that there will be still further tax increases.

And above all, Lindh stressed, there is no feeling of rancor among bandmen. Dissolution of the band, they say, was merely a cold business proposition.

Evangelist to Give Final Service Sunday

The evangelistic services, conducted for the past two weeks at the Christian and Missionary Alliance church, will be brought to a close on Sunday night, instead of Thursday, as previously announced.

The earlier conclusion of the services was made necessary when Evangelist R. H. Roberts received a telegram followed by an airmail letter telling of Mrs. Roberts' sudden illness at Vancouver, Wash. Roberts will speak Sunday morning on the subject "The Stigmata of the Lord Jesus," and his closing message on Sunday night will be on the subject "Subpoenaed."

The band also faced other problems, especially the loss of a number of outstanding soloists, including Jim Conklin and Kenneth Sawyer, who are going to college. Interest in band activity rapidly dropped, as it became evident that financial support would be lacking. Only 14 reported for this week's rehearsal.

Prize Peaches Raised In Orchard Near Bend

Peaches just don't grow in this country, most Bend people think. But J. H. Hall brought a bucketful of proof to The Bulletin office today that shattered the above theory. The bucket contained about two dozen peaches, each three inches through and tree-ripened. They were grown on the Hector Marchand ranch eight miles east of Bend, where Mr. and Mrs. Hall are living. The place has six peach trees and other fruits in the orchard.

Hall was disappointed when he looked through the Deschutes county fair premium book to find the proper classification for his prize production. Peaches weren't listed there.

Stained Glass Window Installed in Church

Dedication of a large stained glass window, a gift from James E. Rentschlar as a memorial to his wife, Anna, who passed away last April, will take place at the First Presbyterian church tomorrow, in connection with the 11 a. m. services. The big memorial window, approximately seven feet square and one of the largest in the church, will face Harrison street. Installation work was under way today.

The memorial was designed and executed by the Pearson Art Glass Co. of Portland, a 50-year-old institution. The window, dominant colors of which are blue and red, is a composite study which has as its main figure Christ knocking at the door and as its lesser studies a portrayal of Christ blessing children and Christ and Mary Martha.

Mrs. Rentschlar, long a resident of Bend, died suddenly last April at Suttle lake. At the time, Mrs. Rentschlar was assisting her husband in the operation of the Suttle lake resort.

The Rev. R. H. Prentice will be in charge of the dedicatory service tomorrow morning.

She attended the summer session at University of Washington and went on the university cruise to Alaska.

Mrs. C. E. Millhollin has returned from Colorado where she took her husband's body for burial. She will sell her real estate and return to Colorado to be near her daughter.

Lee Rennolds will leave Monday for Eugene where he will continue his course in business administration as a senior at the University of Oregon.

Mrs. George Moore is home from San Francisco where she has spent several months. She is at the home of her sister, Mrs. James Short.
