

Chilian Speaks Before AAUW

Juorquero Tells of Education

Education in Chile and the place of women in this South American nation were discussed Thursday night by Professor Guido Juorquero, of the University of Chile, speaking at the monthly dinner meeting of the American Association of University Women, held in the Pine Tavern.

The same general educational system is used throughout Latin America, he explained, using that of Chile as his example. Grade school, which covers the first six school years, is compulsory. This is followed by a six-year secondary school, called a lyceum, where students gain a general knowledge of the world, learn domestic languages and some foreign languages. French is compulsory, since the French were the first teachers there, and English and German are alternates, the professor explained.

After graduating from the lyceum a student may, if he wishes, attend a professional university, which will train him for some trade or profession. There are no colleges, but all prospective university students must pass a bachelor examination before being admitted, Juorquero said. There are no advanced degrees in Chilean universities, and when a student completes his university course, he is ready for his profession.

Tuition fees to these universities are almost nil, amounting to approximately $7 in American money. Juorquero pointed out the complete democracy of this scheme, saying, "Everyone who has the brains and the capacity for becoming a professional must have this opportunity open for him."

All university students are interested in political parties, according to the speaker, and nearly all of them belong to either the liberal or the conservative party. Students are the backbone of all political movements in Chile, and many a coup has been staged, both successfully and unsuccessfully, by those at the universities.

Until 40 years ago, Chilean women had no rights, in conformance with the Spanish idea of women's place, the speaker said. But at the present time education is available to all women in Chile, and women can not only belong to the political parties but are permitted to vote, although only in municipal elections.

Statistics taken from the professional schools show the following per cents of women in their courses: Pharmacy and teaching, 90 per cent women; dentistry, 40 per cent women; medicine, 25 per cent women; law, 15 per cent women; engineering, 10 per cent women.

Recently passed laws give to women the right to manage their husbands' money, if he will permit it.

There are no divorces in Chile, because of the great influences exerted by the early Spaniards, and by the Roman Catholic church, said Juorquero.

Bend High Band Gives Concert

Bend received a spine-tingling dose of morale builder Friday night, when the Bend high school concert band, directed by Homer Waltz, presented its annual spring performance.

"Music for morale" was the theme of the concert, carried out not only in the selections played, but also in the backdrop of red, white and blue crepe paper forming large "V's" placed on either side of a star spangled shield.

The theme wasn't all that was star spangled. Large gold stars should go to each member of the band for individual performances as members of a fine music organization; to the pulsing music which made everyone in the audience want to head for the nearest recruiting station; and to Homer Waltz who once again proved that under his instructions, Bend high school students can turn out a definitely superior band of music.

Marche Slav Thrills
Longest and most important number was the thrilling "Marche Slav," by Tschaiakowsky. The band played it from the same uncut score used by adult concert bands and symphony orchestras—and it was good. It's a difficult piece, and the kids did a swell job on it. From the sublime to the ridiculous, or something, held true last night when the band swung into a novelty version of the classic "The Little Brown Jug Goes to Town," with a sub title, "and the piccolo gets left," in which Jean Lancaster portrayed a perfect picture of frustration as the piccolo player who never gets to play her solo, because each of the other instrument sections slips in ahead of her. Jean finally got in her solo right at the end of the piece, by which time the audience was rocking with laughter, collectively and individually. (But it did seem strange to hear "Little Brown Jug" in the high school gym.)

Both familiar and unfamiliar was the stirring rhapsody, "Cypress Silhouettes," as southern as a bayou, filled with darkling moods and strangely twisting phrases. Featured soloists were Fred Raycraft on the trombone and Earl Mosen on the cornet.

Comedy Number
Joyce Berry and Roland McClure loosened the tension following "Marche Slav" with their clarinet duet, "Pepperino." And laughingly and joyously received was "I'm in the Army Now," sung by the entire band and featuring the cornet trio of Eugene Smith, Earl Mosen and Eugene Brick.

Closing the concert with what is probably the best-loved march in the band, American as its title, the band gave a superb interpretation of Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever," featuring Jean Lancaster in a piccolo solo (uninterrupted) and then the cornet and trombone sections in an ear-blasting second chorus. It was enough to make anyone want to join the army, navy and marines, all at once.

The audience had no chance to grow restive during intermissions—not with Jane and Jim McGarvey doing their own brand of fancy top dancing. The first entr'acte number by the twins was straight tap, including some very neat double buck and wings, and the second was a novelty song and dance arrangement of "I'm Gonna Dance With the Guy What Brung me." Wilson George accompanied the twins at the piano.

Up to 1942 the war effort cost this country over six billion feet of wood—a need of 12 to 15 billion feet is estimated for 1942.

Pine Forest

Pine Forest, March 21 (Special) Pine Forest grange met Tuesday night and the third and fourth degrees were given to Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dudley and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Jensen. V. R. Ier spoke on civilian projects and George Murphy told of farm labor problems. Shutters have been made and were in use during the blackout. Men are asked to work at the hall Sunday between 9 and 12 o'clock, to put hinges on shutters.

The Home Economics club met Thursday afternoon. A quilt was tied and garments given out for Red Cross work. Old paper was bundled, and anyone in the community having old paper is asked to bring it to the hall on Sunday morning.

Mrs. M. M. Watson, juvenile matron, reports that the juveniles are planning victory gardens. A social will be held on April 3.

The Y. G. A. met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brandon on March 13. The advisory committee elected were Mrs. Lucile Smead, Everett Lentz and John Klassen. Three boxes were packed and mailed to local boys in the service. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Heutt, Alice Klassen, Jetta Brosterhouse, Elene Chaussee, Neva Ketcham, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. George Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Lentz and Mazie Smead. The next meeting will be with Jetta Brosterhouse.

The Thursday Book club will meet next week for 1 o'clock lunch at the home of Mrs. V. R. Ier.

Miss Louise Sumner was honored with a bridal shower at the home of Mrs. Oren Monroe Friday afternoon, March 6. Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Clarence Dul-
