OPA AND THE DAIRYMEN
Central Oregon still has a dairy industry. That this is so is no fault of OPA, which until last week consistently refused to recognize that permitted inflation of feed and labor prices had submitted both producers and distributors of dairy products to well nigh intolerable pressure.

These others, it is now expected, will hang on for long enough to see what OPA intends to do to remedy the local price situation. After long aloofness OPA did finally conduct a hearing in Bend last week.

What we mean by this statement can best be explained by reference to the fluid milk butterfat price permitted in the Los Angeles area ($1.08 a pound) and the price permitted in this area (75 cents a pound).

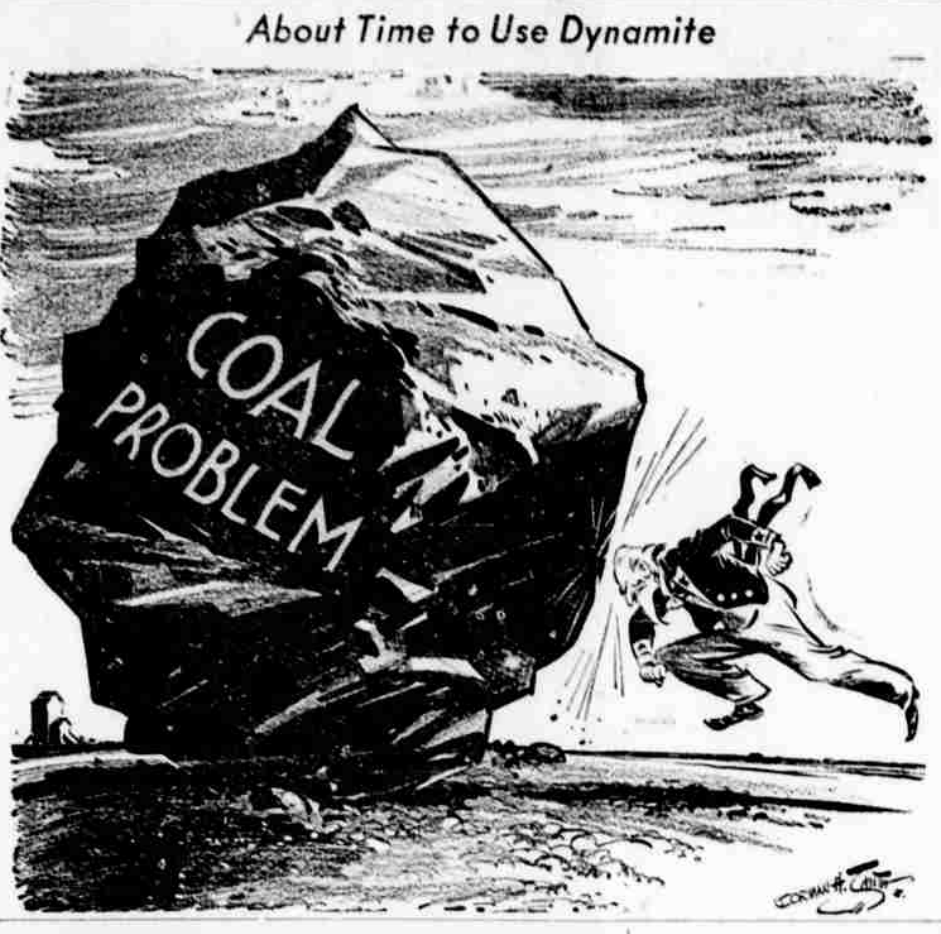

The new pennies which confused us so at first confuse us no longer. They are no longer new; they have tarnished rapidly. The once silvery surface which enabled them to be passed for dimes has tarnished.

Elmer Davis is concerned over the possibility that congress may eliminate the domestic branch of OWI (office of war information). "and my job will be ended."

ability of losing some first class customers now engaged in war work, it is proposed to greatly increase the power output of Grand Coulee and, incidentally, Bonneville.

Montana and Idaho, since they discovered that the further development of power at Grand Coulee will destroy thousands of acres in those states by the construction of dams, swamping a great area of fertile land, are charging that behind the plan for more dams to produce power for customers who do not exist, is a plot to take these waters of Montana and Idaho (without payment) to irrigate the reclamation phase of the Columbia basin.

WOMEN WON'T TALK
BY RENE RYERSON MART

ATTEMPTED MURDER? CHAPTER XVII
Shaw came back while we were still at the table. He said he didn't want to interrupt our dinner and that he'd talk to the servants first.

I gave him the use of my study and we finished our meal in a depressed silence and retired to the living room to await our turn for questioning.

What I didn't know until long afterward was that Shaw hadn't been asking her about the night before. He had been hammering away on our alibi for that first day.

Shaw continued to glare at me for a moment and then he got to his feet. I decided it was time to play my last card.

Shaw didn't interrupt me once, but I saw him glance frequently at the notes he had taken from the others and I felt the hot blood rising in my face.

"I suppose you thought it necessary to hear the others first so you could check my story," I said bitterly.

"But this was different," I insisted desperately. "Don't you see. It wasn't only Derek's dying—it was the way he died, the disgrace."

Shaw's eyes held mine. "You honestly believe that she tried to commit suicide?"

Others Say ...

ESSENTIALS OF STABILIZATION (Wall Street Journal)
A nation engaged in a war for its national life has a triple job. It has to produce a fighting force, it has to supply its fighting force with all the food, clothing and weapons that it needs and it has to support the remainder of the population as best it can.

That is the job upon which we are now engaged. We are employing for its performance what economists term the price system for distribution of the respective shares of the total production going to each person engaged in the whole process.

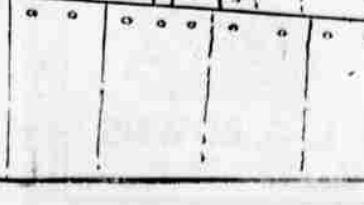

To reach the necessary and equitable distribution of product between the three main groups integrated in the total effort two things are necessary. Supply for the fighting forces and the people engaged in producing their necessary things comes first.

It can not be done without both these mechanisms. The whole trouble with our attempt at price stabilization today is in the fact that the necessary rigidity of prices has not been accomplished.

The Diary of Henry Larcum Abbot

Following is another installment of the first publication of the diary of Henry Larcum Abbot, topographic engineer, who as a member of the Pacific survey party, visited the Deschutes country in 1855.

June 21 Thursday (1855)
This morning I over slept myself, and I was awakened by Capt. Wyse who entered to ask me if I wished to send word to Williamson.

It has a hole entirely through its base large enough for a boat to pass through were it not for the furious dashing of the waves. It is a favorite resort for seals and I could see many of their dusky forms in and upon it.

After a complicated series of rotations I stopped, and then jumped upon my feet entirely unharmed and let me here recommend to all persons proposing such a feat to themselves, to be wise like myself, and select a sand hill to do it on.

Washington, June 21 (AP)—The supreme court ruled today that the citizenship of Russian-born William Schneiderman, California communist leader, could not be revoked because he was affiliated with the party when he took his naturalization oath of allegiance in 1927.

Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone filed a lengthy dissent. Justice Frank Murphy delivered the majority opinion, in which Justices Stanley F. Reed, Hugo L. Black, Owen J. Roberts and Felix Frankfurter concurred.

Gold was first mined in what is now Colorado in 1858.
