3 Men Overdue At Long Creek

State police in Central Oregon reported today they were without information relative to Clifford Meacham, Joe Estabrook and Bud Peters, overdue at Long Creek, in the John Day country, since September 29. Police added, however, that officers working out of the Pendleton office, are continuing the investigation.

Meacham and Estabrook, Indians, had been at The Dalles fishing, and when they were missed their nets were still in the river. Peters, according to information from Madras, was to pick up the two men and make the trip to Long Creek. The trip was to have been made in a Chevrolet pickup.

Meacham, brother of the late George Meacham of Warm Springs, was expecting his army orders, and had expressed his desire to keep closely in touch with his board. The fact that no further word has been heard from him has led to the fear he might have met with some mishap. Meacham is the son of Mrs. Charles Jackson of the agency.

State police in Bend had not been called in on the case, but the investigation reached out from The Dalles and Pendleton.

Allies Steadily Punch Holes in Japs' Defenses

By Louis F. Keenle (United Press War Analyst)

The fierce resistance which the Japanese are putting up in north-eastern New Guinea against Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces is a stand of desperation, rather than a hope of reversing the steady defeats which they have suffered.

It merely shows their alarm over the dangerous hole being punched in their outer defense line in the Pacific. MacArthur has not yet been given the weapons to strike the "massive blows" on a larger scale which are basic in his strategy. He is nevertheless working into a tremendously important offensive position.

Under Handicap
The Japanese now are fighting in New Guinea under a considerable handicap. They lack proper air support because of the destructive blows dealt to the bases at Wewak and Rabaul. Their supply problem is complicated for the same reason and their shipping losses have been great.

As the situation stands, there is every prospect that MacArthur will be able to take possession of Madang and Wewak, which means almost complete domination of New Guinea.

From such a position, MacArthur would be able to strike directly northward towards the Philippines, his avowed goal, or northeastward towards Truk by way of Rabaul. Because of unremitting allied activity in the Solomons, flanking Rabaul on the other side, the latter course seems extremely probable.

Islands Held Goal
That is particularly true because it would be an integral part of a westward smash by the fleet against Wake and the Marshall and Gilbert islands.

Therein lies the greatest danger to the Japanese. Truk, a powerful naval air base, is the keystone of Japan's arc, or triangle of outer defenses. It is far more important than Paramushiro, at the northern end.

With Truk gone, there would be no effective barrier between there and the Philippines. The Marianas and Bonin islands, guarding the direct route to Tokyo, would be exposed.

Japs Fear Attack
That is why Japan has been speaking with apprehension of an expected American attack on the Marshall and Gilberts. They will put up a last ditch defense of those islands, but their boast that they will risk a decisive naval battle there is probably untrue.

The decisive battle and the turning point of the war in the Pacific is more likely to come at Truk. American naval air power is evidently pointing towards it from the south and the east.

BRANDIS THRIFT-WISE DRUG

MORE ABOUT OPA Target

Director Peterson has taken a definite stand against the OPA. Examiner Griggs made it plain that the agriculture department had no legal right to remedy any situation, but that it could "make recommendations" to the OPA.

Explaining that he was primarily interested in determining local reaction to the milk ceilings established by OPA, Examiner Griggs observed that it would also be "interesting to know" how the audience felt about the subsidy. He asked: "Is it the general opinion that the subsidy is a good thing?"

Answer Is Negative
"It's a joke!" "No good!" "Rotten!" came from the group as some guffawed and others hissed. First witness for producers to take the stand was James Jewell living 11 miles north on the Dalles-California highway. His testimony reflected the general attitude of other witnesses. Under questioning by Examiner Griggs he told how he had been forced to cut his herd to 13 cows, and that he is being forced to "sell more."

At this point Examiner Griggs asked: "What do you think the producer should get per pound for butterfat?" "At least $1.25," Jewell quickly answered.

Nels Anderson testified that he had been a milk producer in the county for 30 years, and that now he has his place up for sale. After other witnesses had pointed out that Anderson's herd was "above the average" for production, Anderson said: "The 90 cents is just a drop in the bucket, and I just can't continue in business with costs what they are. So far as the subsidy is concerned I'm afraid of it—there's too much red tape!"

In getting 80 cents for grade C milk, Rolla M. Chase testified "I'm taking in more but I'm not making anything."

From other points, say like Eugene? "The price is prohibitive," Lay said. "We have investigated all angles, and with a 10 per cent increase in labor costs the 13 1/2 cents ceiling established by the OPA would not permit of expansion in order to take care of the demand."

Jess Harter, another producer, told Examiner Griggs in answer to a question: "The milk price should be doubled. If feed costs have doubled, why not double the price of milk? Why I have even been offered 20 cents a quart by some of my customers."

Besides witnesses already mentioned, some of the others present were Earl Williams, Delmer Davis, Fred Sheppard, J. W. Shrunks, O. M. Gloveson and Mrs. I. Cram. Reinforcements into the threatened area.
