

Airroute Plans For Bend Shown

San Francisco, July 21 (Special)—United Air Lines, which has applied to the Civil Aeronautics board for authority to operate in and out of Bend, had its start in the West and has a large number of western executives on its staff, it was disclosed Thursday by company officials.

United today operates over 6,000 route miles which reach to 47 cities in 16 states, the District of Columbia and Canada. Approximately 75 per cent of the company's routes are in the West. The company is the oldest airline operator in the country with a background of 18 years and more than 260 million miles of flying.

United has sought to place Bend and 23 more western cities on its trunk line coast-to-coast and Pacific coast system. The application was filed April 26 and is set for hearing in Washington on October 16. If granted, it will enable United to link the new cities by direct, one-carrier passenger-mail-express service with other key cities across the United States and the length of the Pacific coast.

Mrs. America Meets the War

Apparently the can opener will be able to retain its importance in Mrs. America's household despite wartime conditions. For the war production board has authorized twice as much iron and steel for the manufacture of the household type can opener.

If Mrs. America expects to wield the can opener much, she'd better get out and help the nation's canneries pack this year's crops of fruits and vegetables. Housewives and high school boys and girls are needed to fill the manpower shortage in canneries this year. It takes more canned fruits and vegetables for fighting men overseas than for those stationed in the United States. If you want to help in this vital food project, get in touch with the nearest United States employment service office. There you will learn where and when your help will be needed.

Mrs. America's wartime slogan of "wear it out, make it do or do without" has focused attention on ceiling prices covering repair services. For example, the dry cleaner, the cobbler, the laundry, the household appliance repair man or other service establishments cannot charge you more than they did in March, 1942. Of course, you can't remember that far back. However, if you have any questions about the charge, ask the dealer about it. He is required to show you his ceiling price lists, which are exact copies of the lists filed with local OPA boards.

And here's a peach of a price regulation for homemakers. Fresh peaches for table use are under price control for the first time. The new price ceilings mean reductions to shoppers of an average of about 25 per cent below prices charged last year.

Homemakers will welcome news from the war production board that a limited production of electric water heaters has been approved. Further, the war production board established a new quota for production of non-electric water heaters. Restrictions also were removed from the manufacture or fabrication of metal jackets for water heaters. It was pointed out that metal jackets will be permitted again because paperboard proved unsatisfactory.

Mrs. America, give your landlord a break and take care of his property. Because of wartime conditions, landlords are having difficulty obtaining materials and manpower to make necessary repairs. You'll want to get a copy of a handy booklet put out by the OPA rent control division entitled "Uncle Sam keeps your rent down—You must keep your home up." It covers the "do's and don'ts" of preventive maintenance. Ask for it at your local OPA rent office, or write the Regional In-

Blood Derivative To Be Released

A new blood derivative, useful in the prevention or modification of measles will soon be available, at no cost, to civilians, the American Red Cross has announced. The new product, called gamma globulin, is made possible by a newly developed process of separation, and will be released by the navy for distribution under supervision of the Red Cross as the amounts available exceed the requirements of the armed forces.

The new process will in no way reduce the amount of blood plasma or serum albumin required for treatment of wounded servicemen, but will rather add one more service to the long list of accomplishments in the blood donor program.

By agreement with the navy, the American Red Cross, the association of state and territorial health officers, and the commercial laboratories who are doing the processing at cost, the new blood-derivative will be distributed through state departments of health and local health authorities.

The Red Cross agreement was drawn to insure that citizens in need of the measles prophylaxis may receive it at no cost, since the blood was voluntarily donated by the American people. Actual cost of preparing, bottling and distributing will be borne by the health agencies who distribute it.

The gamma globulin will be available for use within 30 to 60 days, but it will be obtainable only through physicians, who, in turn, will receive it through public health agencies. It may not be obtained through the American Red Cross.

War-time ice cream may not be as rich or smooth as it was in prewar days, but it can be very refreshing. Keeping the ice crystals small is the secret of smoothness, says Elizabeth H. Boeckl, home demonstration agent. This is done by plenty of beating of the partly frozen cream, and by stabilizers such as gelatin and eggs.

The very top of the bottle of milk is thick enough to whip if allowed to stand in the refrigerator for a day or two. Take 1 1/2 cups of milk, mix with 1/2 cup of sugar and 1/4 teaspoon of salt, and heat. Add two egg yolks and cook over hot water gently until thickened. Dissolve 1 teaspoon of gelatin, which has been soaked a few minutes in 2 tablespoons of milk or water by holding over hot water. Stir this into the milk mixture and cool. Add 1 teaspoon of vanilla. Whip the egg whites and mix with the cool custard.

Set refrigerator to coldest temperature, pour about 2 tablespoons of cold water where the tray will sit, pour mixture into tray and freeze. If it becomes too hard, break it up anyway, pour the partly frozen mixture into a bowl and beat quickly until smooth, but not melted. Before removing the tray of ice cream, whip 1 cup of the thick cream mentioned before, and quickly fold into the partly frozen custard mixture. Return to the freezing tray with a little more cold water under the tray, which quickens the freezing process, and freeze but do not freeze too hard. Try to keep the ice cream at a slightly soft creamy texture.
