Lady Legislators Now Fine Friends

By Eulalie McDowell (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Jan. 6 (UP)—Any one looking for a fight in the new congress may be wasting his time if he's hoping for a direct clash between the two prettiest representatives — Reps. Clare Boothe Luce and Helen Gahagan Douglas.

Because Mrs. Luce, the republican from Connecticut, and Mrs. Douglas, the democrat from California, seem to have buried the hatchet—if, indeed, a hatchet ever existed.

More than a hundred Washington newspaperwomen looked on in surprise Thursday when the two lady legislators shook hands and smiled sweetly at each other to bring a highly unscheduled climax to a dinner given by the women's national press club.

Three Are Honored

The affair was given in honor of the three new women in the lower house of congress — Mrs. Douglas, Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse, D., Conn., and Mrs. Emily Taft Douglas, D., Ill. Other congresswomen were present but the audience was mostly interested in the fact that was supposed to exist between the Mesdames Luce and Douglas.

With only Rep. Frances Bolto, R., O., separating them, the two publicized rivals sat through a couple of speeches — without an exchange of words.

Then Mrs. Douglas rose for her speech. "I have resented," she began, and turned sharply toward Mrs. Luce. The audience of newspaperwomen gasped and even Mrs. Luce looked startled.

"I have resented the position they have jockeyed us into," Mrs. Douglas continued. "Then, like a flash her hand was out and Mrs. Luce jumped up to grasp it.

Blonde republican and brunette democrat, whose so-called rivalry has been building up since last summer when each took the feminine spotlight at her respective party convention, shook hands firmly, and stood there beaming sweetly at each other.

The audience cheered. "Then each returned to her corner, Mrs. Douglas to declare: "They didn't promote fights between the hilly-billy senators." She proceeded with an earnest, emotional plea for lasting peace.

Churches Observe Special Month

Churches of Bend are observing January as "Go to Sunday School and Church Month," it was announced by local pastors today. The first Sunday will be "every member present Sunday" and the second will be "bring one" day, and pastors hope that many not now attending Sunday school will attend. The third week is to be devoted to "the whole family in Sunday school." The fourth week is to be "every one there" day.

"The Bend Ministerial association, in sponsoring the month, is cooperating with similar groups in other cities in drawing the attention of the citizens of the state to the value of Sunday school," an announcement states. "Very few people would deliberately choose to move into a community without churches or Sunday schools," the announcement adds, concluding: "Therefore this effort is being made to secure a greater use of the facilities of church life in our community."
