

THE WAY OUR PEOPLE LIVED

WHEN NEW YORK WAS YOUNG

Mrs. Lawrence came from one of the original Dutch families that had settled New York. Her maiden name was Greetje Van der Lyn. She possessed the innate Dutch qualities of order and obedience. In her management of the household she retained some of the customs of her upbringing. The sitting room of the Lawrence house was, in no sense, a lounging place. It was never opened except on momentous occasions, and these were months apart. On all ordinary occasions the dining room was used as the living room.

"Charles and Nellie Mason," said the Major, nodding toward his Virginia friends, "are here on what may be called a leisurely tour, just to see the place. They've been to Philadelphia for a week, and after they leave our town, they're going to Boston, and from there back to Virginia by sea. Am I right, Charles?"

"You're quite right, sir," Charles Mason replied. He was a tall, lean, handsome man of 30 odd. Miss Fraser soon learned that he was inclined to be talkative. Nellie, his wife, had that fond, innocent look in her eyes that one sometimes sees in the eyes of pet animals.

"We saw some very, very interesting curiosities today," said Mr. Mason. "One was a porcupine, his back full of darts, which the man said he shoots at you if he doesn't like you."

"They look like writing pens," Mrs. Mason remarked.

"Did he shoot any at you?" the Major inquired.

"Not a dart," Charles Mason replied. "He liked us, I suppose. We paid sixpence to see the porcupine, and another sixpence to look at what they call a Japanese. But I don't believe it's a Japanese."

"Oh, the showman took his solemn oath that it was." This came from Mrs. Mason.

"Ha! ha! ha!" guffawed the Major. "Of course, it's not a Japanese; it's a monkey."

"This is the advertisement in the Gazette that we read, and it caused us to go," Mrs. Mason asserted. She produced a newspaper clipping, and read in her soft southern voice that Mr. Edward Willet is showing—

"A creature called a Japanese, about two feet high, his body resembling a human body in all parts except the feet and tail. He walks upright and performs various actions to admiration, such as walking upon a line, hanging and swinging under it, dances to any tune, etc."

"You must not believe what you read in the gazettes," said Mrs. Lawrence.

"Well, what difference does it make?" Charles Mason argued. "I'd never seen a monkey, nor had Nellie, so our sixpences are well spent after all."

"Have you been to the theater yet?" Miss Fraser asked.

"No, we haven't; we got here only two days ago—on Thursday," Mr. Mason replied. "Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence have asked us to go one evening next week. I understand that this company of actors—Murray and Kean, aren't they?—is the first set of players you've ever had in New York. That's right?"

"No, not quite correct," said the Major. "We've had plays here before occasionally, but nothing regular. This company looks like it will be permanent. They have a lot of plays and are going to give them all."

"I've never understood," the Major continued, "why the theater and its players have been so cruelly treated in the colonies."

Miss Fraser remarked that there was more than one reason. First, the character of the players—they are roving folk, with no fixed home. The second reason is, she said, that many people believe the theater attracts the idle and the dissolute.

"We don't treat 'em badly in Virginia. We've had actors and theaters and plays ever since I can remember," Charles Mason said. "They are welcomed in South Carolina, too. There's the Dock Street Theater in Charleston."

"Yes, three colonies—Virginia, South Carolina, and now New York," the Major said. "Everywhere else they're condemned at sight. Why, my dear sir, do you know what would happen to you if you gave a play in Boston? The pillory and the jail, or perhaps 40 stripes on your bare back, followed by expulsion."

"The Murray and Kean company—here now—gave some performances in Philadelphia," Mr. Mason remarked.

"Yes, they did, but the authorities ordered them out of Pennsylvania, so they came here."

"New York has many interesting things," Miss Fraser remarked, "besides waxworks and monkeys and stage plays. Go to Ranelagh Gardens and Vauxhall and take a look at them. They're beautiful, even in winter."

"We're going to see them all," said Mrs. Mason, "before we leave. I want to go down to the tip end of the island, where the fort is, and look across the bay."

"That's called the Battery now," Major Lawrence told her. "In summer it is a beautiful place, with all the trees in leaf. He paused a moment, as if in reflection; then he turned to Mr. Mason. "Charles, if you will come with me in the morning, I'll show you a piece of New York that a traveler seldom sees." Looking at Mrs. Mason, he said, "No, Nellie, this excursion is not for you. Charles will tell you all about it when he returns."

"It sounds like something devilish," Charles Mason said. "I'm all for it."

Paper Need Told As Pickup Is Set

"We must have more paper!" This was the battle cry of members of Bend's Junior Chamber of Commerce as they geared for another city wide pickup of salvage paper next Sunday.

George Thompson and Don Higgins, co-chairmen in charge of the Jaycees' salvage campaign here, were in receipt of information from national paper salvage headquarters indicating the urgency for a greater paper collection. They said that the national headquarters reported that in 1944 there was a shortage of 1,000 tons of salvage paper from the goal set by the war production board.

Unless persons save and donate their old paper to the war effort, there will be a further curtailment of paper for civilian use, Higgins and Thompson were advised. A statement from the national headquarters said in part:

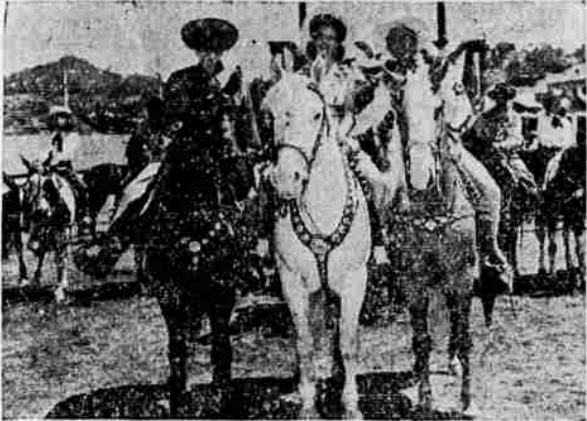

Civilian Cut Seen

"One thing is certain, the army and navy are going to take all the paper they need, which is as it should be. We civilians will get what is left. Further civilian cuts can be avoided, or held to the minimum, if we keep up the pressure behind this campaign."

The Junior Chamber members, heeding the urgency of the call for additional salvage paper, said they planned to pick up the paper off Bend streets and send it direct to Portland by truck. This move, they said, will make it imperative that donors securely tie their bundles or pack it in cartons sufficiently strong to withstand shipping.

Residents were asked to have their paper ready and placed on street corners early Sunday morning. The routes that the trucks will follow Sunday will be made known in The Bulletin tomorrow.

S. W. Redmond

Southwest Redmond, Jan. 11 (Special)—Judge and Mrs. H. C. Ellis of Bend were recent dinner guests at the August Anderson home.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Wilden entertained the Frank Nutleys at their home at New Year's day dinner.

Laurel Brown spent several days during vacation visiting in Prineville with her cousins, Verita Hein and Winona Baxter.

Pvt. and Mrs. Francis Winkler returned Wednesday to their home in Tacoma, Wash., after spending the holiday with Mrs. Winkler's parents, Mr. and Mrs. August Anderson. Mrs. Winkler is employed in a doctor's office in Tacoma.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Denton were Christmas dinner guests of Mrs. Caroline Wood.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Wilden were Sunday dinner guests at the John Hopper home.

On Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Enlow entertained a few friends honoring their son Marvin's birthday anniversary. Games and music were enjoyed and refreshments were served by the hostess. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Wolgram and daughters of Bend, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Holt and children, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Wilden, Burton Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Milfred Walenburg and daughter, and the N. W. Enlow family.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Wilden and Mrs. Sam Ritter were business visitors in Bend a week ago Friday. While there they called on Mrs. Bruce Johnson, a patient at St. Charles hospital.

Uncle Billie Rhoads spent the holiday season with his sister, Mrs. Ann Gardner, of Bend.

Qwen Brown and sons were Sunday callers at the Carl Gallo-way ranch.

Nadine and Iris Davenport called on Mrs. Francis Winkler Sunday afternoon.

Dorothy McLeod and Laurel Brown were Friday and Saturday guests at the home of Mrs. Robert Denton.

Twelve members and nine visitors attended the meeting of Redmond grange home economics club at the grange hall last Tuesday afternoon. The business session was presided over by Mrs. Laura Ahlstrom, chairman. Plans were discussed regarding the making of a quilt by the club. A pattern was selected and members were asked to bring cloth pieces for patchwork to the next meeting. Refreshments for the next three grange sessions were decided upon, as follows: Jan. 12, steamed pudding; Jan. 26, sandwiches, and Feb. 19, jello and cookies. Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Charles Wilden. Mrs. Frank Walenburg and Mrs. Henry Truax will be hostesses for the afternoon of Feb. 6 at the hall.

Missing Child And Car Found

Seattle, Jan. 12 (AP)—Two-year-old Roger Hohman couldn't figure out what all the fuss was about as he played with his toys at 24 hours he was the object of a frantic search after he was accidentally "kidnapped."

He's had a nice snooze in his father's car yesterday. Only when he woke up, hours after his father had left him in front of a hospital in suburban Renton, the car was parked on a lonely Seattle street and a policeman was staring in the rain-spattered window, shouting, "It's the kid!"

Excitement Missed

Roger missed out on all the excitement. His father, Albert Hohman, 24-year-old mechanic at Boeing aircraft company, had driven from their Kent home to see his wife, in the hospital with a new baby brother for Roger. The two-year-old was slumbering peacefully when his dad left him in the back seat of the unlocked car with the keys in the ignition.

Enter the kidnaper—only Roger slept through this act—and, sizing up the easy theft, hopped in the car and sped away. If Roger had more in his vocabulary besides "hello" and "mamma, daddy," he could tell how the surprised thief did a double take when he saw the boy in the back seat.

Police believed the man tried to change Roger's diapers and then abandoned the car where it would be found easily.

EDUCATORS TO VISIT

Madras, Jan. 12 (Special)—Earl R. Cooley, state supervisor of agricultural education and D. A. Emerson, state supervisor of high school education, will be here Friday night January 19 to meet with people in Jefferson county who are interested in the possibilities for Jefferson county's educational future. The principal discussions will take place at this time.
