Youngsters Earn Million Dollars On Oregon Farms

Approximately 18,000 Oregon boys and girls, who accounted for 54,791 youth placements in farm jobs made through county farm labor offices in 1944 earned more than a million dollars and picked crops valued at over $10,000,000. Such is the estimate of Russel M. Adams, assistant state farm labor supervisor in charge of youth activities in the O.S.C. Extension service, made on the basis of reports from county farm labor assistants.

While detailed figures are not obtainable on all youth who helped with Oregon 1944 harvest, reasonably complete figures are available for the 172 organized platoons which are estimated to have accounted for about a fourth of the total youth placements.

Boys and girls were placed in harvest jobs by county farm labor offices in 33 of Oregon's 36 counties last year, Adams reports. Marion county led in placements with 15,150, followed by the city of Portland with 9,582, Lane 8,292, Yamhill 5,146, Linn 3,283, Benton 3,086, and Clackamas 2,923. None of the totals includes the thousands of youths who went out on picking jobs without registering at farm labor offices.

Aid With Crops
Youth platoons worked in 11 different crops, including berries, beans, filberts, cherries, onions, peaches, prunes, parsnips, flax, hops and tomatoes and in addition did weeding and hoeing. The 172 platoons harvested 15,564 tons of crops valued to the grower at $2,566,000, with a total income to the youthful pickers of $239,400.

Many platoons went from one crop to another as the season progressed. The highest number of platoons, 154, picked berries, 77 worked in beans and 29 picked filberts. Beans provided the greatest total cash return to the youngsters with $36,892, an average wage of $3.15 a day per individual. Berries ranked second with a total picking income of $75,622, or an individual average of $2.23 a day. For all crops, the platoon members averaged earnings of $3.63 a day.

The average age of those in platoons this year was slightly over 13 years, compared with about 12 years last year. This indicates a carryover of more experienced help from last year, Adams believes. Those in platoons probably are somewhat younger than those working independently, Adams adds.
