

Coast Lumbermen To Bear Brunt of War on Nippons

Eugene, Ore., Feb. 1 (UP)—Lumbermen of the west coast will have to bear the brunt of the Japanese war in the Pacific, J. P. Boyd, director of the lumber and lumber products division of the war production board, told members of the west coast Lumbermen's association Wednesday at a luncheon which concluded the annual convention.

"Lumber restrictions will remain tight, tires will continue to be scarce, and the manpower situation will not improve much," he said. He assured lumbermen that the government had faith in their ability to overcome these handicaps.

Boyd congratulated members on the fine job they have done but warned that lumber is much more critical than it has ever been and that every foot of production is needed and will be needed even after the defeat of Germany. He said lumbermen cannot expect much of a letdown in demand and there will be a great need for these products in the reconversion program overseas as well as terrific pent up demand for lumber in this country.

Problem Faced
Leonard Lamport, of Minneapolis, past president of the National Lumber Dealers association, said the biggest postwar problem of the industry will be maintaining effective competition with the many defense plants which will be equipped to convert to the production of aluminum, steel and other construction materials whose demand rivals lumber.

Lamport suggested an intensified advertising campaign to sell the public on lumber. Competition for the consumer dollar will be keen, he predicted.

"The British submitted through the foreign economic administration a request for 200,000,000 board feet of Douglas fir and west coast hemlock," revealed H. V. Simpson, of Washington, D. C., representing the WCLA office there, in a surprise announcement.

New Industry Due
Earlier in the day, Dean Johnson, of Portland, president of the association, predicted "a revitalized lumber industry, progressive and dynamic, which will assume its full share of postwar employment," in his picture of peace time industry.

"The one national development which should be apparent to every logger, timberman, lumberman and wood worker is the necessity for our industry to go on a sustained yield basis in the foreseeable future," Johnson said. "While sustained yield forest land management will add to our costs, it is necessary if we are to continue as a stable and permanent economic industry."

Wood Utilization Topic
The closing session also heard Carl Rishell, Minneapolis research expert, who demonstrated several theories of wood waste utilization.

The association held its first regional meeting in Tacoma last week. Columbia valley lumbermen met in Portland yesterday and wound up the sessions at the Eugene conclave.

Johnson stressed the importance of renewing the great resources of the forest despite the added cost as "the one natural development which should be apparent to every logger, timberman, lumberman and wood worker."

Passing over the part the lumber industry has contributed to the war needs of the nation, Johnson pointed out that any postwar building would have to follow the release of mills from their obligations as producers of one of war's most important raw materials.

Sound Methods Necessary
"Sound business methods must be adopted throughout the industry if we are to develop a financially sound postwar operating position," he said, and declared that the following steps should be taken:

(1) Begin a national advertising campaign to consumers selling lumber on a quality basis. (2) Renew immediately relations with retail lumbermen, (3) increase refinement of lumber products, especially as this applies to seasoning, grading, grade-marking, double and trimming and improved bundling, (4) carefully avoid the overproduction which has been so unhealthy for the industry in the past.

Lumber prices are bound to rise after the war, Johnson said, pointing to higher costs of transportation, increased workmen's wages and sustained yield costs as reasons why American builders of the postwar period will find the product more expensive.

Must Cut Costs
"One of the most important possibilities in reducing the cost of manufacture is research in the utilization of wood products which will enable the industry to use more of each tree, and thus cut costs all the way along the line," Johnson said. "The lumber industry is pursuing this research with vigor, and the world can expect important developments soon after the war."

Col. W. B. Greeley, secretary-manager of the west coast Lumbermen's association, acted as chairman with Johnson during the session.

Liquor Measures Passed By Senate

Salem, Ore., Feb. 1 (UP)—A series of bills extending the powers of the liquor control commission in regulating the sale and use of liquor in the state were due for house consideration soon, after being passed by the senate late yesterday.

The bills engendered some heated debate in the upper house, with Sen. William Walsh, Coos Bay, charging that the bill which gives the commission power to further limit purchases, would "open another 'big stench' and a demand for an investigation at the next session."

Object Explained
Sen. Irving Rand said that the object of the bill was to relieve the commission of erratic demands for special brands of liquor now unobtainable.

The other bills give the commission stronger confiscatory powers over illegally operated drinking places.

Six house bills, encompassing minor changes in the industrial accident compensation laws, passed the senate and went to the governor for signature into law.

It was the senate's busiest day so far, as it passed 17 measures.

Rex Wharton, 14, Hurt in Accident

Rex Wharton, 14, of Rt. 1, Box 377, a carrier for The Bulletin, received severe bruises last night when he was accidentally struck by an automobile driven by Thomas H. Foster, 1445 East Eighth street, on Greenwood avenue, police reported today. The accident occurred between Fifth and Sixth streets.

Foster told officers that he was blinded by the headlights of an approaching automobile, and he had driven over to the side of the street as far as he could when he struck the boy, who was walking with the traffic. Foster placed Rex in his automobile and took him to the St. Charles hospital. He was treated for his bruises, and was sent to his home today.

Soldiers Prefer Oregon Ballots

Portland, Ore., Feb. 1 (UP)—Oregon's soldier-citizens used the state absentee ballots in the November national election at a ratio of more than 11 to 1 over the federal ballot, according to figures announced here today by the state elections department.

However, the total number of state ballots returned to be counted in Oregon was impressive enough, with 30,336 soldier votes counted. The total of the federal ballots was only 2,618.

The number of state ballots sent to servicemen was 39,458, thus indicating that about 9,000 did not use them if they received the ballots.

Prineville Team To Play Burns
