

Civil Rights Bill Ready for Senate

By Eric W. Allen, Jr. (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Salem, Ore., Feb. 1 (AP)—The "civil rights" bill, which has created a stir in the capitol this week, was due to be reported out of committee today, probably without recommendation, and will be debated by the Oregon senate tomorrow.

The bill, making it a misdemeanor to refuse public accommodation to a person because of race, color or creed, was discussed at a well-attended hearing Tuesday night, and violent debate was anticipated for it when it hits the floor tomorrow.

The house decided to act today on the senate bill appropriating $25,000 for the joint legislative liquor commission investigating committee, which passed the senate yesterday by a 19 to 10 vote.

Called "Rathole"

Sen. Frederick S. Lamport of Salem said that the money would "just go down the rathole." He predicted that prohibition would come again "within four years" if "the liquor commission is not removed from political suspicion."

Proponents of the bill asked its passage to clear the name of the liquor commission, which has been charged with illegality in the purchase in 1943 of two distilleries with the Washington state liquor board.

Gov. Earl Snell, who originally asked for the investigation to clear the commission, was accused of having a "bad case of political jitters," by Sen. Thomas Mahoney.

Story Related

The story was told by Lt. Col. John K. Borneman, Nlagara Falls, N. Y., one of three chaplains rescued at the camp.

The other two chaplains were Lt. Col. Alfred Oliver, Washington, D. C., a Methodist, and Capt. John J. Dugan, Boston, a Catholic.

Borneman, a Presbyterian and chaplain of the 60th coast artillery, said that most of the anti-aircraft batteries on Corregidor had been knocked out by Japanese artillery firing from Bataan on the night of May 5-6.

That was the night the direct Japanese assault on the fortress was launched.

The Japanese, attacking with a force of about 10,000 men, lost almost 5,000 men in the assault but succeeded in putting 5,000 ashore. They obtained a foothold on the eastern end of the island but those who were not killed were sealed off.

"General Wainwright was grand throughout, but he wouldn't let any more personnel die. We later learned the Japs had 60 batteries of guns and 240 howitzers on Bataan which had pounded us for over a month."

At 10 a. m. over the Voice of Freedom radio station, we sent our surrender to the Japs."

Borneman placed American casualties in the final Corregidor battle at 150 men. In the entire stand on Corregidor, he said, about 350 Americans were killed. He said he knew his figures were correct because he supervised the burials.

When Corregidor fell, he said, it still had a garrison of about 15,000 of whom 7,000 were Americans and the remainder Filipino troops.

Borneman revealed that the surrender message was read over the Corregidor transmitter in Japanese by a Hawaiian Nisei soldier.

During the long months of captivity the morale of the American prisoners was kept up by listening to a radio which was built and operated secretly by Lt. William B. Gibson who had been a radio concern representative in Manila when the Japanese attack came.

He went to Corregidor as a civilian technician to aid in the operation of the Voice of Freedom transmitter.

On the morning of Corregidor's surrender he was commissioned a second lieutenant.

Over this radio the Americans were able to follow the progress of the war. They heard of the steady progress of MacArthur's drive northward; of the landing on Leyte and finally of the landing on Luzon. They eagerly checked the progress of the Luzon drive but their rescue came as a surprise.

According to their calculations they had not expected their deliverers for several days more.

Dead Not Buried Borneman said that one of the chaplains in the Corregidor group died last year of dysentery. Oliver was held in solitary confinement for a month and punished for smuggling notes out of the camp. Most of the chaplains were transferred to Japan last year.

"For many months," he said, "the Japs wouldn't let us bury our own dead but we could have services inside the camp. The Japs often put 20 prisoners in a common grave, dropping them in like cordwood."

All during the imprisonment the chaplains conducted regular religious services. However, they were forced to submit their sermons to the Japanese in advance for approval. And while the sermon was being delivered an interpreter stood at the chaplain's elbow to see that he did not vary from the approved text.

The rescue of the prisoners reported from receipt of intelligence reports which revealed the existence of the camp.

Strike At Night The commando column moved out of the main American lines with air cover and struck at night under the leadership of Col. Henry A. Mucci who was awarded the distinguished service cross for his part in the operation. All other officers received the silver star and the men won the bronze star for their accomplishment.

Officers installed were Mrs. Lester Swagert, oracle; Mrs. Byron Benson, past oracle; Mrs. Howard Benson, vice-oracle; Mrs. George Zufelt, chancellor; Mrs. L. M. Rice, recorder; Mrs. Martinus Anderson, receiver; Mrs. Jack Berigan, marshal; Mrs. Earl Weber, assistant marshal; Mrs. R. L.
