IN LIEU OF VEHICLE TAXATION
Discussing the proposal of the Oregon counties that the share of the state highway fund returned to them be increased from the present 15.7 per cent to 20 per cent Charles A. Sprague, in his column in the Oregon Statesman, says that the counties have pressing demands for road funds and so it is but natural for them to call for a larger split with the state.

Though all that the former governor says may be true he misses, it seems to us, the point of the whole business. He argues as though the contribution of highway funds to the counties had no basis other than the desire of the counties to get more money for road work.

CALL FOR A BLUE PRINT
Henry Wallace has never told the country just what he means when he talks about "small business" and the "common man" and perhaps this is an intentional omission.

everyone, come happiness or hard times. In discussing the revised full employment bill, Senator Murray quotes from and endorses Governor Dewey's San Francisco campaign speech of last September in which the Republican presidential candidate stated that the government's first job is to create job opportunities when there are not enough private jobs to go around.

Washington Column

By Peter Edson (NEA Staff Correspondent)
Washington, D. C.—Montana Senator James E. Murray's highly controversial "ever-normal economy" bill, officially titled "The Full Employment Bill of 1945," has just been introduced in the new congress after a complete job of overhauling and re-writing.

When Senators Murray, Truman and Revercomb put the idea for this bill in a report submitted to congress last December, their purpose was merely to stimulate discussion of their original concept of preparing an annual budget for the entire national economy, private as well as public, and then trying to do something about it.
