

Western Coast Struck By Gale

Portland, Feb. 8 (AP)—A sweeping gale which coupled with a lashing rain yesterday to give western Oregon and Washington its worst storm in nine years, appeared to have abated today but left in its wake one person dead, damaged power and telephone lines, buildings and roads.

Victim of the storm was Jess Hoyer of Raymond, Wash., who was driving on the Aberdeen-Raymond highway when a falling tree crashed into his car, killing him.

Slides Result

Damage to power and telephone lines was less than expected with officials of these companies stating that all important service had been continuous and that damaged lines had been repaired with rapidity. Power was off in Astoria for three hours Wednesday.

The heavy rain caused a number of slides through the storm area with heaviest damage on the Wolf creek highway of Oregon where traffic and bus schedules were delayed considerably.

Portland had 1.24 inches of rain in 24 hours yesterday.

Drive for Clothing Spurs Amicability

Out of the present campaign in Deschutes county to gather usable clothing for the use of Russian civilians today loomed the prospects that closer and more friendly relationships between local residents and our war allies will result. For the Junior chamber of commerce, sponsoring the Bend drive, reported today that they had received 3,000 "greeting cards" which may be attached to the bundles of donated clothing.

The cards, bearing the American flag and greetings in both English and Russian, have a space for the writing of a message to the Russian recipient of the clothing and provision for the name and address of the donors. The cards are available at the salvage depot, 826 Wall street.

Virgil Lyons and Frank Prince, Jr., co-chairmen of the Bend Jaycee campaign, today expressed satisfaction with the amount of clothing being received at the depot, reporting that twice as much had been received yesterday as the day before.

While residents were still urged to bring their bundles to the depot if possible, arrangements were completed today, it was said, for the participation of a number of school children in the collection and delivery of the school children's activities in the drive, reported that squads of the children would cover the city following school tomorrow.

Large shipments of clothing were expected from outlying districts tomorrow and Saturday, the day the drive ends. Wade Short, chairman at Redmond; George Wakefield at Sisters, and John C. Johnson, Lapine have reported a fine response to the appeal for discarded clothing.

Milwaukee Police Teaching 'Teen Agers Respect for Law

Milwaukee (AP)—Chief of Police Joseph T. Kluchesky and his assistants are teaching "teen-aged youngsters in Milwaukee public and parochial schools the meaning of law and order.

The new educational program is changing the old method whereby according to Kluchesky, the first and perhaps only time most children came in contact with officers of the law occurred when they got into trouble.

Now, however, the youngsters, in groups of 50 to 100 meet every Saturday morning with police officers and observe the functions of the police department at the safety building.

"Besides serving a crime prevention movement, the program will help the youngsters in becoming law-abiding citizens," the police chief explained. "Movies and talks will instill in them the importance of respecting other people's property and the penalties for vandalism."

Emphasizing the necessity of obeying bicycle traffic laws for their own protection, the children will learn early in life to acquire good traffic habits for they are the future motorists of the community, Kluchesky said. The chief decided to inaugurate the educational program after two "test courses" given in one public school stirred up great interest. The decisive sessions were arranged by Captain Hubert Dax, now in charge of the training school, who felt that the facilities of the police bicycle school for
