

Nelson, McSpaden Tie in Tourney; Playoff Booked

By John Lewis Stone
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
New Orleans, Feb. 13 (UP)—Those golf club duellists, Byron Nelson and Harold (Jug) McSpaden, were scheduled to meet today in an 18-hole playoff for first money in the $5,000 New Orleans open. They finished the 72-hole competition with identical cards of 284.

McSpaden blew up in the final 18 holes yesterday after leading the field by five strokes as play began. He shot a four over par 76 on the last round while Nelson, who was precision personified, played at the same even pace and closed out with a one under par 71.

Winds Bother Play
The players were handicapped by strong winds and wet fairways, which made the tough city park course even harder to negotiate.

Nelson, the Toledo, O., veteran, made a game bid to take the one title on the winter circuit that has eluded him for six years but was a stroke short. McSpaden, who had been at his brilliant best of the earlier rounds, had trouble with tee shots and putts and was unable to settle down in the final 18.

Claude Harmon of Grosse Pointe, Mich., was third with a 289 total. Finishing with cards of 73 and 75 yesterday, Sammy Snead of Hot Springs, Va., was fourth with 290. Snead also split a $500 war bond with Sam Schneider of Corpus Christi, Tex., for cards of 69 in yesterday's play. The bond had been offered as a special prize for the lowest cards on the final day of the meet.

John Bulla Fifth
Johnny Bulla of Chicago was fifth with 291, while Fred Haas, Jr., New Orleans, finished sixth with 292. Haas also was the low amateur, winning out over Ed Furgol of Detroit and Utica, N. Y., who had a bad day and finished with a total of 302 after leading by two strokes at the half way mark.

Other low scores were Jack Groat of Chicago, Henry Picard of Harrisburg, Pa., Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., and Denny Shute of Akron, O., all with 293; Sammy Byrd of Detroit, Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Schneider with 294; Ed Dudley of Atlantic City, 295; Willie Goggin of New York, 296; Leonard Ott of Denver, 297; Bruce Colfart of Absecon, N. J., 297; Chick Ruff of Birmingham, Mich., 298; George Low of Clearwater, Fla., 298, and Tony Penna of Dayton, O., 298.

Oregon, Staters To Battle Again

Corvallis, Ore., Feb. 13 (UP)—The Oregon State Beaver basketball team that defeated the northern division conference leader, the University of Oregon, scheduled practice sessions today and Wednesday in order to be in top shape for next Saturday night's encounter here with the same foe.

The Beavers bounced right back into contention with their victory of last Saturday, but they will need to win the next one, too, in order to keep in the running. Oregon leads now by one full game, and another victory over OSC would put the Webfeet in an excellent position to take the title.

Tall Team Feared
Coach A. T. (Slats) Gill of the Beavers isn't going to take any chances with the tall, lanky Oregon team. The Webfeet put on a rally in the last game that came within four points of tying the score, after trailing at the half by 11 points.

No changes in the Beaver's starting line has been announced by Gill, and probably will include Bob Labhart and Ted Henningsen, forwards; Red Rocha, center; and Bernie McGrath and Larry West, guards.

Big Ten Coaches Decry Roughness On Maple Courts

By Walter Byers
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Chicago, Feb. 13 (UP)—Officials should enforce the "hands off" rules now in the book and stamp out the rough-house tactics which are beginning to dominate basketball, Big Ten coaches said today.

Basketball still is basically a non-contact sport and officials should end the rapidly growing tendency to make it a contact game by crowding, rough playing and chopping, they said, explaining that it is not a case of drawing up new rules but merely enforcing the writing in the rule book.

"I believe there is too much judgment being used and not enough whistle," Harold (Bud) Foster, University of Wisconsin coach, said.

Game Is Rough
Head Coach Benny Osterbaan of Michigan and his assistant, Bill Barclay, both agreed that basketball at present is too rough since the "officials are unwilling to slow the game with a parade to the foul line."

"The boys adapt themselves to the officiating," Barclay said. "If the referee shows he means to call the fouls, the boys will stop fouling."

Although there have been singular instances in the past of coaches asking for better officiating, this marks one of the rare times that all of them have agreed on one point—namely, that basketball is too bruising and that it is up to the officials to concoct the cure.

Carlson Comments
Their statements came upon the heels of last week's comment by Doc Carlson, Pittsburgh coach, who said that the time has come to decide whether the game is a contact or non-contact sport.

Indiana mentor Harry C. Good, suggested a disqualification foul for anything more than body contact, however, while Barclay and Pops Harrison of Iowa asked for a return to the four-foul rule. The fifth foul is causing much of the bruising play, they claimed.

"To give the little guy a break in competition with the big man, Piggy Lambert of Purdue, Good and Barclay suggested that 12-foot baskets be tried, an idea originally voiced by Phog Allen of Kansas.

The rest of the coaches, however, were content with the present anti-goal tending restriction as enough to curb on the big fellows.

HOLDS BIG LEAD

Detroit, Feb. 13 (UP)—World champion Willie Mosconi's lead in the cross-country pocket billiards title match with Ralph Greenleaf reached 1,019 points today after he took a pair of decisive victories in yesterday's opening play here.

Chemicals from seaweed will be produced on a large scale in a new adventure by a British firm in the islands of South Uist and Benbecula in the Hebrides.

Today's Sport Parade

By Jack Cuddy
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
New York, Feb. 13 (UP)—Hype Igoe—bard of boxing; minstrel man of maul—has gone to join the immortals whom he glorified in his sagas of the ring; and they will welcome him because he was their crony and a great champion in his own line.

From the days of "Gentleman Jim" Corbett, little Hype and his glowing tales of gladiators probably did more to popularize prize fighting than the heroics of any ring-bok about whom he wrote. For he was a genius at capturing the drama, romance and color of this strange profession.

Igoe of the New York Journal-American was dean of New York boxing writers when he died Sunday night of a heart ailment at Flushing hospital—67 years "young." He never grew old mentally. He never lost his enthusiasm for the sport, despite many illnesses before his death.

His unflinching buoyancy was illustrated before the Louis-Bradock heavyweight title fight at Chicago in June, 1937. Mike Jacobs and the brigade of sports writers threw a party at the Morrison hotel for Hype, celebrating his 60th birthday. Hype—though suffering from the shingles, a skin inflammation—was the life of the party. Always on the alert for a gag, it was at his suggestion that the lights were turned out in the banquet room when a certain editor, who had a reputation for long-windedness, rose to speak. The editor said, "Just sit still boys, and I'll talk to you until the lights come on." About five minutes later, a waiter turned on the lights—and there was the editor talking to himself. His audience had sneaked out in the darkness. Igoe loved and lived boxing throughout his career on the San Francisco Examiner and the New York papers—Journal, Sun, World, and Journal-American. He did roadwork with the fighters in their camps and was a buddy of virtually every champion from Corbett down. He mingled with the managers around the taverns, and with the strange characters found around the gymnasiums. They never seemed strange to him.

There was the day in Boston when the portly little man with the sharp features and pince-nez spectacles was attending funeral services for the late Ernie Knaef, who had died after being knocked out in New York by the huge Primo Carnera. Little Hype sat far back in the church, alone and unnoticed in a pew. He was meditating upon the solemn grandeur of the funeral mass when someone sidled into the pew alongside him. Hype did not lift his head. Suddenly a horse whisperer hissed his ear: "Hype—listen! I got the gold-damdest heavyweight you ever seed. His name is Jose Santa, the Portuguese giant, and I wanna—"

Telling the story later, Hype said, "I was so surprised, I didn't know whether to belt the guy on the lug or to burst out laughing. But then I remembered, 'This is boxing.' So I told him to keep quiet and see me outside."

He managed Stanley Ketchel awhile—until Ketchel came into Igoe's bachelor quarters (the famous "fleabag") one day and, pulling two pistols, informed Hype that Wilson Mizner would pilot him from then on. This incident did not spoil the close friendship between Igoe and Mizner, who were a prominent duo in the night life at the then popular Jack's restaurant.

Mrs. Craig Coyner, USO director, telephone 649.
Mrs. Chris Kostol, Mrs. Don Williams and Mrs. Olaf Skjersaa will chaperone the party.

Both players informed Klepper that they were in fine physical condition and ready to report for spring training at San Jose, Calif.

Idaho's Vandals Defeat Huskies

Moscow, Ida., Feb. 13 (UP)—The University of Idaho Vandals came from behind in the second half last night to defeat the Washington Huskies, 39-34, in a northern division Pacific coast conference basketball game.

Trailing at one time 18-5 and at the half 24-16, the Idaho five put on a rally in the first seven minutes of the second half to overtake the Huskies, 28-27, never giving up the lead from there on.

High man for Idaho was Jeff Overholser with 10 points, while Dick King, Husky guard, bagged 12.

The result failed to change conference standings and Washington and Idaho remain in fourth and last place, respectively. The teams meet again tonight.
