

Official Asserts High Taxes Due In Post-War Days

Washington, Feb. 14 (AP)—Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., today told congress that a strong postwar tax system must be maintained "at a rate far higher than prewar expenditures." The public debt, he added, must be reduced as rapidly as possible.

Morgenthau proposed these policies in his report to congress on the fiscal year 1944, which ended last June 30. And for the first time, he went on record as favoring postwar tax reductions to encourage expansion of private enterprise.

"Such measures are essential to the realization of full employment in a peacetime economy of free enterprise and competition," he said.

He added that "little if any" tax reduction could be expected until major hostilities cease. Prewar tax relaxation, he said, might tend to defeat the aims of the stabilization program. The treasury is working with a joint committee from congress on matters of postwar tax policies.

Sees No Question

He assured congress that there was no question of the ability of the country to pay off its huge public debt.

Morgenthau poured cold water on reports in financial centers that the government was about to offer higher interest rates on its securities offerings.

"Continued low interest rates," he said, "will be a major contribution to economic stability and the maintenance of full employment after the war, for low interest rates stimulate business and encourage new enterprise."

The interest rate on the public debt as of June 30 last year averaged 1.93 per cent, Morgenthau said.

Touching on the Bretton Woods monetary and fiscal agreements, he declared that economic cooperation will facilitate the revival and growth of world trade. To achieve these goals, he added, world cooperation with the proposed international stabilization fund and bank is essential.

Receipts Mount

Total treasury receipts during fiscal 1944 were $45,400,000,000 or five and one-half times those of 1941, Morgenthau said. Nevertheless, he added, they met less than half of the war's costs in the same 12 months.

He said he does not expect individuals to cash in their war bonds on a large scale when the war is over. But he predicted high spending from income, based on security afforded by their savings in government securities.

"The distribution of savings bonds among many individuals in the relatively low income groups will enhance the contribution of such spending to the maintenance of economic stability," he said.

Judge Miller paroled Male and put him on a five-year probation. He said the old man could go back to Oregon, whence he returned voluntarily to answer to the old charge. All he needs do, the judge said, was to report every six months to the Marion county probation officer.

First Aid Work Due for Cadets

Beginning with Monday night's class, first aid lessons and lectures will be given to the cadets of the Civil Air Patrol in double sessions, in order to shorten the time required for the full course, it was announced by John Mogan, first aid instructor. Under this setup the cadets will be able to complete the course in first aid within 2 or 3 weeks. Monday night's class period was spent on review of artificial respiration and a study on fractures and sprains, including the practical application of the traction splint.

Following the first aid class at the Bend high school, the cadets reported to headquarters, in the Bank of Bend building, where a training film on aerodynamics was shown. The cadets were then given ten minutes of indoor drill and dismissed for the evening.
