

Improved Gardens In '45 Sought in Victory Campaign

Oregon's 1945 victory garden program calls for the continued effort of all gardeners in the production of gardens that are even better planned, says W. L. Teutsch, assistant director of the extension service at Oregon State college, in announcing plans for the third straight year of all-out victory garden effort.

The extension service both nationally and in the states, has again been requested to take the leadership in initiating state and county victory garden programs, says Teutsch. As in the past, nearly the entire extension staff will participate in some capacity.

Approximately 100 members of the state victory garden committee replied to a query from Chairman William A. Schoenfeld, dean and director of agriculture, saying they favored a continuation of the Oregon program and that a state conference is not needed this year. County victory garden committees will be called together where necessary, however, to develop plans in which all agencies and organizations can operate, Teutsch added.

McWhorter State Leader
O. T. McWhorter, extension horticulturist, will continue to be state leader of the victory garden program for the extension service, with Robert E. Reider, assistant extension entomologist and plant pathologist, as assistant state leader, and A. G. B. Bouquet, professor of vegetable crops, assisting in many phases of the program.

The number of gardens grown on farms in Oregon has been estimated at 55,000 for 1944, the same as the estimate for 1943, Reider reports. This means there were gardens on about 90 per cent of all Oregon farms. The number of gardens planted in cities and towns in 1944 is estimated at about 120,000 a reduction of 25,000 from the 1943 estimate. Fully as many are needed again this year, agricultural officials agree.

Marvin Jones, war food administrator, has said that home gardeners produced more than 40 per cent of the fresh vegetables in 1944 and that they are asked to equal that record in 1945.
