Redmond Soldier Seen in Islands

Cpl. Harold D. McDonald, reported missing in action on Bataan since May 7, 1942, was later seen in a Philippine prison camp, his mother, Mrs. W. F. McDonald of Redmond, learned Monday afternoon in Portland at a meeting of liberated prisoners of war and next-of-kin, conducted by the American Red Cross.

A former prisoner of war told Mrs. McDonald, "I knew your son in a Philippine prison and the last time I saw him he was safe."

son last in April, 1942, when she received a letter from him telling of his promotion to corporal and stating that he had been ill but had recovered. He was then on Bataan, and his mother had not heard from him for five months.

Two Veteran Bend Seabees Back From Pacific Islands

Veterans of 29 months of service in far islands of the western Pacific, two Bend Seabees, A. D. ("Fritz") Horn, motor machinist 1/c, and Jack W. Johnson, carpenter's mate 1/c, were back in Bend today, certain nothing they saw in their long travels equalled the beauty of the snow-capped Central Oregon peaks. The two men enlisted at the same time, trained together, sailed westward on the same transport and returned home together.

Furthermore, they were met in Klamath Falls on their return by their wives—and Lou Horn and Dorothy Johnson have been living together while their husbands were doing their bit out in the Pacific country the Japs once claimed as part of their empire.

Central Oregon and its snow along higher levels looked so good that the two Seabees got out of their car on the Sun mountain summit and engaged in a bit of snowballing—and thought of torrid days in the Pacific when humid temperature soared up to 130 degrees and swarms of insects made life miserable.

Once in the Pacific, Johnson and Horn were separated, on two islands about 200 miles apart, but they were together in the invasion of the Marshalls and the Gilberts. They were among the first to land, and for their service under fire wear two battle stars. Most of their service was in the Ellis Island group, but they know quite well the region covered by American forces in their sweep north last year and the year before.

In the far Pacific, Horn and Johnson saw no one from their home town of Bend, but in Hawaii, where they had been stationed in recent months, they "met up" with a number of Central Oregon service men. They met Dick Poole and Stan McGinnis, of Bend, at Pearl Harbor.

After their leaves end, Johnson and Poole will report at Camp Parks, Calif., for reassignment.

Tijuana Aglow as U. S. Blacks Out

Tijuana, Mex., Feb. 28 (AP)—This sleepy, little border town, steadily cashing in on the war-booming tourist trade, is now aglow at night like never before since the U. S. government's midnight curfew order.

Night clubs, most of which formerly closed at 2 a. m., can now remain open all night and liquor is served 24 hours a day.

The entertainment mecca of San Diego war plant workers is only 17 miles from San Diego.

Lapine Gives Aid In Clothing Drive

Lapine, Feb. 28—More than 400 pounds of salvage clothing was gathered in this community by school children of Lapine and was turned over for the relief of Russian civilians, according to a report today by John C. Johnson to George Simerville, coordinator for the civilian defense council, Bend.

The children, according to Johnson, set up collection depots at the school and at Powell's store, and covered the district with posters which requested clothing. This was followed by a thorough canvass of the area. In accepting the clothing, Coordinator Simerville advised Johnson that the contributions were unusually high per capita for the Lapine community. The clothing was delivered to the Bend salvage depot and was transported with other contributions to Portland.

Red Cross Drive

Kiwanis club were mapping plans for a whirlwind campaign there; and committee chairmen in Sisters reported all in readiness for a veritable "money-gathering offensive" there.

"We have just been furnished with valuable information from the national Red Cross headquarters," Chairman Rath stated. "And this report should immediately show every right-thinking resident the importance of aiding the Red Cross at this critical time."

The report purports to list the achievements of the American Red Cross from March 1944 to March 1945, and sets forth some of the gigantic accomplishments as follows:

Data Presented
Telegrams, letters and radiograms concerning servicemen, handled by the Red Cross field directors, totaled 14,000,000.

Prisoner of war food parcels packed in Red Cross centers totaled 10,800,000.

Pints of blood collected, 5,000,000.

Servicemen, ex-servicemen and their families given guidance, information and assistance in communities by chapters, and in camps and hospitals by field directors, 5,000,000.

Movies shown in hospitals, 150,000.

Overseas clubs and clubmobiles in operation, 921.

Kit bags for servicemen made, 3,240,000.

Sunset Division 4 Years Abroad

Headquarters, 41st Division, Far Pacific, Feb. 28—Unless too preoccupied with the pressing business of killing Japs the famed 41st infantry division will pause on March 22 and celebrate the commencement of its fourth year of solid overseas service in combat zones.

The Pacific Northwest's "Own," the 41st left the U. S. on March 22, 1945, and was the first American division to reach the southwest Pacific.

Since, the outfit has established one of the most notable combat records in World War II. The men fought through the Buna-Sananda-Gona campaign, made the first amphibious assault in the southwest Pacific at Salamaua, and have smashed the Japs at Al-tape, Wakde, Hollandia and Blak.

Sets World Mark
It was at Salamaua the 41st set the world record for continuous fighting in foxholes by enduring 76 continuous days and nights without relief or respite.

More Jap prisoners-of-war have been taken by the 41st than by any other division. The total of 1,218 individual awards earned on the field of battle exceeds that of any other unit in the Pacific.

Other than the 41st no outfit in this theater of warfare has been honored with three presidential unit citations. The personnel of what is undoubtedly the most famous of all national guard divisions, was largely drawn from Oregon.

OCD Will Honor OPA Volunteers

Plans for a dinner on Wednesday, March 7, at which volunteer workers for the OPA will be guests of the Office of Civilian Defense were nearing completion today. The annual dinner will be in the Pine Tavern, at 7 p. m. Aside from volunteer workers, others interested in the war-time program assigned the OPA will be welcome, and reservations can be made either through the OPA office or Mrs. George Simerville.

A meeting of the newly organized community service panel, headed by Mrs. Simerville, was held Monday night in the OPA office. This panel is composed of representatives of various groups and organizations who are to serve in liaison capacities.

NO 'PIPE DREAM'
Bluffton, Ind. (AP)—Her man Strahm's "pipe dream" came true. Seven years ago Strahm turned a small section of an iron pipe into a savings bank for small coins by cementing the ends and cutting a slot in the side. When he discovered that it was filled, he opened it to find $97 within and so ordered a war bond for each of his five children.
