

Blood for Luzon Magic Password For Priorities

By E. G. Valens
(United Press War Correspondent)

Advance Base Blood Bank, Somewhere in the Marianas Islands—Blood for Luzon—this is the magic password which automatically gives hundreds of pints of whole blood daily a transportation priority over all other articles of war.

Successful battlefield delivery of whole blood in quantity was impossible four months ago. Today it is heralded as one of the greatest forward steps in medicine since the start of the war and present plans call for doubling the daily supply of 500 pints for the Pacific area.

"Because of this," said Lt. Col. Douglas B. Kendrick, Atlanta, Ga., special representative of the surgeon general, who has returned from an inspection tour of Pacific blood-dispatching facilities, "a soldier wounded in a forward area such as Luzon has a better chance for speedy treatment and recovery than if he were injured in New York City."

Permits Quick Surgery

Availability of whole blood in battle zones would mean nothing alone, Kendrick said, but, combined with surgery, penicillin and the most up-to-date medical facilities, "it means more men can live who otherwise would die—you've got to live long enough for surgery and penicillin to help you."

Naval Lt. Herbert R. Brown, Jr., Rochester, N. Y., officer in charge of the blood bank here, explained that most surgery in the past had to be postponed until the patient could be transported to a large army or navy hospital because major surgery cannot be performed without a ready supply of whole blood. Five to 10 pints may be required for one long operation.

Although blood plasma is also vital, Brown said, it cannot take the place of whole blood. Battle shock comes from hemorrhages, and in this case plasma can only tide the patient over until he is taken to the rear for surgery. Availability of whole blood at field hospitals makes immediate surgery possible.

Recovered in Two Weeks

One serviceman, for instance, had an explosive shell fragment in the abdomen and lost two and one-half quarts of blood, Kendrick related. He was given 12 transfusions of whole blood from the states and was hale and hearty in two weeks. "Without whole blood," Kendrick said, "he would have been flat on his back for two months before he could ever be moved."

Because of this winter's progress in whole-blood preservation and delivery, Brown said, no hospital after the war will have any excuse for not having a blood bank.

"We can now send blood to any spot on earth with the exception of enemy-held territory," Brown concluded, "and from now on out we expect blood to be available on all our beachheads."

If It's Gas They Want—We Have It

Some interpreters of German propaganda reaction to the Yalta Conference saw hints that Germany might resort to desperate use of poison gas. Uncle Sam thinks two can play at that, and is well prepared if that's the way the Germans want to play. He has millions of gas shells and the latest in gas warfare (top); new protection like the anti-gas bag (lower left); his troops are trained in gas warfare (center); and he has efficient means of launching the deadly shells (lower right).
