

7 Persons Killed In Plane Crash

San Francisco, March 15 (AP)—Seven persons were killed and 16 were injured when a twin-engine naval transport plane crashed on a ridge near San Carlos, Cal., last night, 28 minutes after circling the Oakland airport, the 12th naval district announced today.

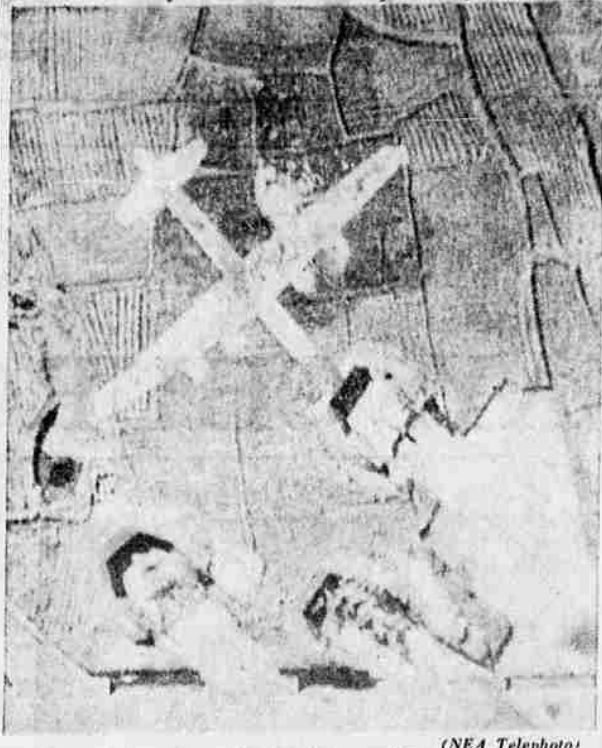

The plane, a Douglas transport bound from San Pedro, Cal., to Oakland crashed on a spur of the coast range three miles west of San Carlos at 8:12 p.m. The big transport, carrying 20 passengers and a crew of three, all believed to be service personnel, was last reported 3,000 feet over the airport, some 25 miles from the crash scene at 7:46 p.m., the navy said. At that time the transport asked permission to land.

Cause Not Known

Cause of the crash was not immediately determined. Casualties were taken to the army's Dibble General hospital near Palo Alto, Calif. Names of the dead and injured were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

The crash was first reported by the San Mateo county sheriff's office, who said the plane did not burn. Wreckage was strewn over a wide area on the ridge, which was difficult for searching parties to reach.

Jap Aerial Booby Trap

(NEA Telephoto)

American airmen weren't fooled by this Jap aerial booby trap set at Tien Ho airfield, French Indo-China. A decoy B-29 is painted on ground, scaled so that dummy plane appears to be flying at several thousand feet. Viewed from great height, it gives illusion of B-29 in flight with flames streaming from one engine. The Japs intended to give unwary fliers, who dropped down to render assistance to apparently stricken ship, a hot reception from heavy concentration of anti-aircraft guns set up nearby. U. S. Ensign Roy Dyer Visitor in Bend

Ensign Roy A. Dyer, who received his navy commission in exercises held at Columbia University, New York City, on March 8, arrived here yesterday for a short visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Dyer, 132 Harmon boulevard, before reporting to Dallas, Texas, for flight training in the navy air corps.

A graduate from Bend high school with the class of 1938, Roy first enlisted in the marines while a student at the University of Oregon, and later transferred to the navy. He was then assigned to the Midshipmen's school at Columbia University for special training.

While a Bend high school student, Roy was a Lava Bear backfield star, and at the University of Oregon won coastwise recognition as one of the outstanding players in the conference.
