Pacific Storms Lash Coos Bay

Coos Bay, Ore., March 26 (UP)—Coos Bay was navigable only for the sturdiest ships today for the tenth straight day of a severe storm.

Veteran pilots could not recall when the bar has been so rough over such a long period.

High seas subsided slightly but two loaded schooners made no attempt to the leave the docks. One has been held in port since Mar. 12 and the other since Mar. 21.

Powerful seas hit so hard inside the bar at Charleston yesterday that a floating dock was torn from its moorings. Hundreds of persons watched the raging ocean from Coos Head over the week-end.

Crews of Seabees were at work attempting to salvage lumber from the broken hull of the SS Alvarado, which went aground a week ago near the harbor entrance.

Churches Sponsor Noonday Program

Observation of Holy week opened in Bend yesterday, with Palm Sunday services held in many local churches, and today the observance continued with noon services for the general public, at the Capitol theater.

The noon services are being held under the sponsorship of the Bend Ministerial association. Each service will be of 40 minute duration, and will continue through Thursday. At the Episcopal church on Friday from noon until 3 p.m. there will be special Good Friday exercises.

Attendance at the opening noon service today at the Capitol was below expectations, but ministers in charge believe attendance will increase. Scripture readings, prayers and the singing of hymns comprise the daily programs, and each noon-day service will be concluded by a 20 minute address. Paul Hornbeck leads the group singing.

Business organizations have announced that their employees will be free to attend the Holy week services at the downtown theater.

Officials Expect Dazed Nazi Armies to Rally, Put Up Fight

Washington, March 26 (UP)—Lack of immediate German resistance to allied armies east of the Rhine does not necessarily mean a clear path to Berlin, military observers warned today.

There is a growing belief here that the nazis may have made their last major effort at the Rhine. But it is tempered with the realization that the dazed German armies may be able to organize strong defenses once they have recovered from their initial shock.

The question should be answered shortly as the stalling allied columns move deeper into Germany.

The Russians apparently are meeting stiffer resistance to the east. Observers are beginning to wonder whether, as frequently suggested, the Germans may continue vigorous resistance in the east after the western front collapses. Up to the Rhine, however, German resistance was as determined in the west as in the east.

It is too soon to speak of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third army "driving towards Berlin," observers believed.

The direction of his drive remains to be seen, one possibility is northwards toward Kassel, which would be consistent with the Third army's assignment with the 12th army group.

On the other hand, the Third might plunge eastward in an effort to separate northern and southern Germany and meet Russian forces moving on Vienna.

In either case, however, Patton's advance will be limited by supply considerations if not by resistance. His forces already are extended after cleaning up the west bank of the Rhine south of the Moselle.

to mark the troublesome "Japanese" positions.

Bombers Straddle Target

Then the dive bombers whined down in a steep glide and fired their rockets and machine guns. The target was straddled. The bombers roared off to regain altitude for another strike—this time with bombs. Fighters and cannon-firing medium bombers joined in and soon all the troublesome targets were silenced or left blazing.

The spectators were served steak and mashed potatoes, brought up in trucks. They also had cold beer, imported specially for the show and dropped by a supply parachute a couple of hundred yards from the spectators. The beer was purely incidental. The idea was to show how troops could be supplied from the air.

Marine Corps Shows Air Role In Ground War

By Sandor S. Klein (United Press Staff Correspondent) Quantico, Va. (UP)—The marine corps has shown a gathering of steel-helmeted newsmen how it uses airplanes to help its ground troops move ahead.

Live bombs, rockets and bullets were used to give a realistic touch to the demonstration of close air support of infantry.

Speakers included Lt. Gen. A. A. Vandegrift, marine corps commandant, Vice-Adm. Aubrey W. Fitch, deputy chief of naval operations for air, other high-ranking army, navy and marine officers and a group of Brazilian air officers.

'Japanese' Entrenched

Ground forces in the show were under orders to move forward and destroy "enemy" parties, capture prisoners and locate enemy bivouac areas. For the sake of realism, the enemy was designated as Japanese.

The marines had advanced up a small rise when they found themselves pinned down by artillery and machine-gun fire from an old barn and pillboxes atop a hill about a mile in front. By radio, they asked for air support to knock out the impediments to the advance.

Division headquarters promised speedy help from the air and within a few minutes a group of dive bombers appeared overhead. Meanwhile, the ground troops laid out white cloth panels and set off colored flares to show their own positions. At the same time, a white phosphorous shell was fired maintain a coherent defense system but were trying separately to contain the numerous allied bridgeheads.

Armies Probe to East

Tonight, front dispatches from the northern end of the front reported, there are four separate British and two American Ninth army spearheads probing eastward from the new west Rhine positions.

All along the line from north to south reports of German resistance were spotty. One battalion or company would encounter tough going while the units on its flanks would move ahead virtually unopposed.

The whole allied assault line was on the move into Germany's last-ditch defenses beyond the great Rhine barrier, advancing with gathering speed and power against an enemy apparently stunned by the greatest aerial bombardment in history.

Armored task forces of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's U. S. Third army were far out in front of the allied offensive and rolling ahead at breakneck speed.

New Analgesic Tablet now released to public

(Pain Relief) Thousands find it gives quicker, safe relief from headache—from pains of sinus, neuritis, neuralgia and arthritis

FOR MANY YEARS aspirin has been accepted by both the medical profession and the public as a safe, sure way to relieve pain.

But many people who had complete confidence in aspirin did not find it gave quick relief from blinding, maddening pain as they hoped for. Hence in desperation they sometimes turned to other remedies less well proved.

To meet this situation a group of medical research men set out to see what could be done to speed up the analgesic or "pain-killing" action of aspirin—to make it bring their patients quicker relief, without heart or stomach upset.

Out of these researches came a really new kind of analgesic tablet, a combination of aspirin and calcium glutamate. In this new tablet, aspirin does its old, safe job of relieving pain. But through its combination with calcium glutamate, extensive tests by physicians showed it gave most people both quicker relief and greater relief from pain.

After this extensive testing and use by members of the medical profession as a prescription remedy, this new analgesic tablet has now been released for non-prescription sale by every druggist. It is called Superin (from super-aspirin). You can get its blessed, quick relief from pain by asking your druggist for a bottle today—50 tablets for 50¢. Ask for Superin—Superin.
