Another 117 Nazis for Yank Prisoner Bag

Captured in wood near Ingbert, Germany, 117 more Nazi prisoners are marched to the rear by U. S. Seventh Army troops. Sudden collapse of Siegfried Line defenses has choked roads with confused prisoners moving to rear area camps and U. S. equipment moving up to help clean up remains of organized German resistance on Rhine's west bank. Signal Corps radio-telephoto.

DISCHARGE FILED
Honorable discharge papers were filed yesterday with the county clerk's office by Richard Harold Goodwin, formerly of the U. S. naval service.

Damaged Ships' Names Revealed

Washington, March 27 (AP)—Adm. Ernest J. King today disclosed the names of some battle-damaged warships, including four escort carriers, a cruiser and a destroyer.

Usually the navy withholds the names of such ships until they are repaired and back with the fleet. But King revealed the names of some of them reporting to Secretary of Navy James Forrestal about naval operations during the past year. He listed:
The escort carriers Santee, Suwanee, White Plains and Kutkun Bay, all damaged by Japanese gunfire in the battle of Samar last October. This was the engagement in which the escort carriers Gambier Bay and St. Lo, the destroyers Hoel and Johnston and the destroyer escort Roberts were sunk.
The destroyer Ross, damaged by a mine in Leyte gulf on Oct. 19.
The light cruiser Honolulu, seriously damaged by an aerial torpedo off Leyte on Oct. 20 last.

OLD AWARD RECEIVED
Wenatchee, Wash., March 27 (AP)—Martin H. Prell, a retired farmer, was a recipient of the purple heart today—47 years after he earned it in the Spanish American war.
Prell served with troops of the U. S. first cavalry in Cuba and Puerto Rico. He was wounded in the Cuban campaign in 1898.
Indians in the eastern United States grew sunflower and made flour from the seed for food; they also extracted oil from the seed.

"PP&L has stood for progress in our community for 35 years"

says John Vaughan, Superintendent, the Pendleton City Water Department

new development that has come along. It means a lot to this community to have such an up-and-coming organization out boosting for progress."

"You bet I remember when PP&L came to Pendleton! It was in 1910, the same year Vaughan Electric, my former electrical wiring and supply business, was established. In fact, PP&L and I were next-door neighbors then. That was also the first year of the famous Pendleton Round-Up.

"From the time we first had electricity in Pendleton until shortly before PP&L came here, we only had lighting service during the night-time hours. It was certainly an accomplishment when we got round-the-clock electric service.

"But that was only the beginning of many benefits to be followed up by PP&L during the 35 years it has been a citizen of Pendleton. Pacific Power & Light Company immediately started to build up the territory by extending its electric lines to Reith, Helix, Pilot Rock, and other communities surrounding Pendleton.

"As a matter of fact, PP&L has lent a helping hand to just about every worth-while John Vaughan came to Umatilla County with his parents, Clark County, Washington, pioneers, in 1883. The family's first home in Pendleton is still standing. Mr. Vaughan's first job was fireman at the steam generating plant of the Pendleton Electric Light & Power Company, source of the city's first electric service, where he later became an operator. He was also driver for Pendleton's early-day, horse-drawn fire equipment.

Mr. Vaughan estimates that his firm probably wired 75% of the buildings in Pendleton from 1910 to 1937, and as PP&L built lines into the surrounding country, he also did wiring jobs there. He wired Pendleton's first electrically-operated grain elevator (now Collins Flour Mill) about five or six years after PP&L came to Pendleton. Since 1937, when he sold his interests in Vaughan Electric, he has been Pendleton City Water Superintendent. The business he established still operates under its original name.

One of the first electric ranges in Pendleton was installed in the Vaughan home. Today they have an all-electric home with range, water heater, refrigerator and all the small appliances. PP&L's continued rate reductions have made it possible for them to add new electric appliances year after year, without increasing their electric bill.
