Tornadoes Claim Big Death Toll

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 14 (AP)—At least 111 persons were dead as the result of tornadoes which ripped through Oklahoma, Arkansas and Missouri Thursday night and if reports from isolated communities are confirmed the total may exceed 129, disaster officials said today.

Rescue squads continued to dig through the ruins of dozens of shattered communities for missing persons. Late reports showed that the series of twisters had struck 14 separate areas, killing 88 persons in central and southeastern Oklahoma, 17 in western Arkansas and six in southwestern Missouri. More than 700 persons were injured.

Property losses will run into millions of dollars, officials said. The tornado that struck Antlers, a village of 3,200 population in southeastern Oklahoma, left the greatest havoc in its wake. A large portion of the business section was levelled and scores of homes were flattened.

A Red Cross check, which admitted duplications, showed that 76 persons had been killed and four others were reported to have died at the base hospital at Camp Maxey, Tex.

Planes Roar Above
As the cortege made its slow progress through the streets squadrons of giant Flying Fortress and Liberator bombers—symbols of American aerial might—roared overhead.

The crowds which stood five deep along Constitution avenue where the procession passed down the broad avenue of government buildings—most of them erected in the early days of Mr. Roosevelt's administration—watched in quiet respect as the cortege went by.

Here and there in the crowd a woman fainting in the unseasonable sticky heat. Some stood on chairs or boxes to get a better view and many shielded their faces from the hot sun with newspapers.

Crowd Is Quiet
Police said they had never handled so quiet and solemn a crowd in the capital's history. They gave their orders in low, hushed tones and the crowd, many of them members of the armed forces, moved silently and without conversation.

The procession was about one mile long and it required 35 minutes to pass a given point.

At 11:34 a. m. EWT the caisson entered the White House grounds where a combined guard of honor—army, marine corps and navy—was drawn up before the white columns of the center White House portico. Between the guard and the White House was the navy band and over the executive mansion flew the flag at half-staff.

As the caisson was borne past the guard of honor dipped their colors in salute.
