tion opened on Friday evening, with a meeting of delegates. The convocation and meetings of the Church Women's Service League continued through Saturday, and following adjournment the group joined in a motorcade to the summit of nearby Lava Butte, from which the visitors viewed the snow-blanketed Cascades, a cloudless rosary of mountains reaching from Washington south to the tall peak of Thielsen.

100 At Dinner On Saturday evening, the annual convocation dinner was held in the Pine Tavern, with just short of 100 persons present. Rev. Bolster presided and Rev. Kenneth Tobias, of the Bend Baptist church, was the guest speaker.

Mrs. C. V. Bowman, of Portland, president of the Women's Auxiliary of Oregon, spoke briefly, as did Mrs. Remington, and the concluding remarks were by Bishop Remington. Under the direction of C. Dale Robbins, the Bend high school trio, Beverly Wennerstrom, Cynthia Shevlin and Helen Bailey, accompanied by Helen Hudson, was presented in several numbers.

Following the Sunday services, a luncheon was held in the parish house, with refreshments served by guild members from Prineville, Madras, Cross Keys and Bend.

Visitors said the convocation was one of the most outstanding ever held in the huge district.

Black Market Tour of Capital Proposed to Scribe F. Othman

By Frederick C. Othman (United Press Staff Correspondent) Washington, April 16 (AP)—P.S.-s-s-t. You want a black market tour of the capital?

Sight-seeing rides are against the rules of the office of defense transportation, as user-uppers of manpower, gasoline and rubber, and he who disobeys is liable to a sentence in the clink. Yet anybody who looks like a tourist (meaning one who gets freckles on the back of his mouth from looking up at Washington monument) is likely to have a little guy tap him on the shoulder, and say:

"You wanna tour of Washington, mister? Oll the points of interest, $3."

I was coming out of the Smithsonian Institution—which is about two blocks from the ODT—when that happened to me. If Transportation Director J. M. Johnson had been looking out his window, he probably could have watched the proceedings: The gent who needed a shave, the black sedan with the private license plate, the approach, and the brushoff. (You don't catch me going to jail for a look at the Lincoln memorial.)

What brings this up is the fact that the black market seems to be spreading through the warp of my private life and I don't like it.

I still haven't been able to buy a union suit, but one clothier said he'd be able to save me some, maybe, and how'd I like to buy a topcoat? The implication was: No topcoat; no union suits. That's what OPA's Chester Bowles calls a tie-in sale, which isn't exactly black market; dark gray, maybe. There is a hotel here with cigars always on sale. These come 29 packed in a black box, with a name nobody ever heard of, and a price of 35 cents. They taste like any other cigar, but they cost more than twice as much.

The boys in the senate have talked about the black market in meat and one witness has described the double-dyed black market, wherein honest black marketers are cheated by crooked ones. All I know is that my poor bride never yet has bought a piece of meat in Washington for which she learned the price per pound. Ask a question like that, she says, and the butcher replies: "So okay, you don't want it. Next."

The real estate market is the roughest of all, but strictly legal. Nobody ever thought of putting a ceiling on the price of a house and the results now have reached the fantastic.

For six months I have been looking for a place to live. Night before last I saw a house in a medium-grade neighborhood, with three oversized bedrooms and a parlor too small to hold our rug; price, $22,500. The owner said it was a bargain. He could prove it. He produced documents to show that five years ago he paid $15,000 for it.

Standard shortwave frequency modulation radio telephone equipment was used experimentally recently to communicate between the locomotive and caboose of a 70-car long diesel-drawn freight train on an American railroad.

Ex-Bend Residents Lose Daughter

Carol Sue, the four-weeks-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Yeoman, former Bend residents now residing in Portland, is dead, according to word received by local friends today. Details of the infant's death were not given in a telephonic report received here.

Besides her parents, Carol Sue is survived by a sister, Diana, age 4, her grandparents, Mrs. Mildred Wanichuk of Bend, and Mrs. Susie Yeoman, Los Angeles, and great grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Wanichuk of Bend.

Before going to Portland, Yeoman was employed at the Brooks-Scanlon Lumber Company Inc. plant here.

RUBBISH FIRES HIGHEST Chicago (AP)—Careless smokers and rubbish collections caused the most fires in Chicago in 1944, according to figures of the greater Chicago safety council. Rubbish fires were listed as 9,965. Careless smokers were blamed for 2,843 conflagrations in 1944, compared to 2,734 reported in 1943.

Bend Forester Not So Sure He Is Fond of Brush

Confund the brush! And this utterance came today from the one man in the Deschutes county whose duty it is to protect the forests.

It was Gail Baker, fire assistant in the staff of the Deschutes national forest, who was at his office today nursing a sick and severely lacerated right ear.

Baker, in describing the casualty, said that he was struck by a heavy limb while he was trying to load it on a trailer in the Brooks-Scanlon logged off land. The fire assistant, whose duty it is to see that all fires are extinguished in the vast forest, was busily engaged yesterday in getting in a winter's supply of fuel.
