

Motorists Urged to Save Cars By Careful Summer Proofing

Inaugurating their annual Summer-proof campaign, Mobilgas and Mobiloil dealers of this city today joined industry in urging local motorists to avoid having their cars laid up temporarily or permanently because of some mechanical defect or breakdown.

"This is the fourth war summer," stated Al Nielsen. "Few of the new cars have come into the market in that time, and the majority of our cars today are nearly 10 years old. Many have left the highways already, and it is more important than ever to keep those that are left on the job so that workers may use them to keep on the job. Transportation is vital to our war effort."

Bend Flier Now Overseas Pilot

The 31st Air Transport group, England, April 25—Flight Officer Jasper A. Livingston, son of Mrs. H. L. Livingston of 937 East 3rd St., Bend, is a pilot with the 31st Air Transport group, an air force unit in England, engaged in flying vital war supplies to the front-line airports of Europe.

A former flight school operator with the Portland flying service, F/O Livingston entered the service June 27, 1944 after being in the enlisted reserve, and arrived in England October 15. The group to which he is attached operated the first landing strip on the Normandy beachhead and has since evacuated thousands of American casualties from France and Belgium to base general hospitals in England.

Flight Officer Livingston is married and his wife, Mrs. Alleen Livingston resides at 937 East 3rd St., Bend.

Cloverdale

Cloverdale, April 25 (Special)—Miss Ines Johnson and her sister, Mrs. John Johnson, arrived from Oakland, Calif., on Thursday to spend the summer visiting at the home of their mother, Mrs. Olga Johnson.

Norma Ridgeway of Deschutes started working last week at the George Coombs ranch.

Ernest Wiegand made a trip to Corvallis last week, where he spent a couple of days.

About 75 people were present at the Community dinner held on Sunday at the hall.

Edwin Brown and Robert Johnson fished the Deschutes river on Monday, but reported poor luck. Mr. and Mrs. Lee Goodrich spent Sunday in Sisters at the home of Goodrich's mother, Mrs. Della Goodrich.

Mrs. Ray LeBlanc and daughter are spending a few days at the Boyd Simmons home.

Leslie Willis started work this week on a new potato cellar which he is building on his ranch. The gasoline shovel belonging to Squaw Creek irrigation district was used for the excavation.

Mrs. Olga Johnson accompanied by her son Robert made a trip to Portland last week where they spent several days.

G. A. Rieker of Redmond is at the George Billingsley ranch where he is doing carpentry work.

Miss Mable Livesay of Redmond was a visitor at the home of Mrs. Boyd Simmons on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Powers of Bend came out to the community dinner on Sunday.

"You can't keep your car on the job unless you keep your tires and battery on the job" is the warning of Al Nielsen, local Mobilgas and Mobiloil distributor. "No car can run without these vital accessories, and indications are that along with most other civilian commodities they are going to be scarcer than ever. This is particularly true because so many critical materials, such as metals and rubber, are used in these products. That's why dealers are urging customers now to take full advantage of their tire and battery inspection service which helps make these accessories wear longer, and catches small defects before they disable the accessory completely. "Particularly in the case of tires it is necessary to avoid the need for a new one. Proper inspection to keep foreign materials—such as nails, glass, tacks, etc.—out of the tread; occasional cross-switching and recapping before tires are too far gone, may mean the difference between the use of your car and having it laid up in the garage for weeks or months."

Silicone resins, in which silicon is combined with organic compounds, are establishing themselves in many uses, particularly in electrical insulation.
