RURAL SCHOOL TAX EQUALIZATION

Tuesday we referred in this column to the peculiar situation which could develop in Bend if the rural school tax equalization bill should be passed at the general election. This situation, however, is inextricably involved with the changes which would come about in the county as a whole. It is impossible to consider one without considering the other. From a strict financial standpoint the proposed law might or might not be desirable to a district. This would ordinarily depend on whether or not the district in question is doing a real job, whether its taxable wealth is in proportion or out of proportion, one way or the other, to the job which it must do. A uniform levy, which the equalization plan provides, do. A uniform levy, which the equalization plan provides, would naturally relieve the poor but populous district of some of its burden. It would, by the same token, increase the levy on property in a rich, but sparsely settled district, or in one in which school expenses were squeezed beyond reason. All privately owned property in the county, except that in a district of the first class which had not been included, would

We have noted in our earlier discussion that the over-all we have noted in our earlier discussion that the over-air board would pass upon the budgets of individual districts. This authority, however, would not extend to special proposed levies, amounts beyond the six per cent limitation or to amounts required for servicing bonded debt. Nor would such items enter into the amount to be raised by the uniform levy. They would be the special and immediate concern of the local district and would not be distributed on the tax bills of other local districts. Aside from this, it follows the share-the-cost principle followed now within any individual district. Regardless of whether or not a property holder may have children in the public schools, he is taxed according to the value of his property to meet the cost of educating the children who are in the public schools.

She had a broad, shining face, with a few freedles on it, prown the first class (city districts) may be a mitted to the over-all district or with the consent of the best of the first class (city districts) may be also assume, we also assume, which is the over-all district or with the consent of the best of the first class (city districts) may be also assume, and the first class (city districts) may be also assume, and the first class (city districts) may be also assume the first class (city district) the first class (city district) the first class (city district) may be also assume the first class (city district) in the first class (city district) the first are in the public schools.

The measure, as already observed, is designed to meet the needs of districts in rural areas. This is the reason, we assume, that it includes union high school districts, which are especially intended to allow a pooling of resources of a number of rural districts which, individually, would be unable to have the high school facilities which, as a group, they are able to have without difficulty. It is the reason, we also assume, that districts of the first class (city districts) may be admitted to the over-all district only with the consent of the local districts which are already in the organization. It may be taken for granted that admission would be opposed if malysis showed that it would result in a millage increase.

into the super-district.

2. Seek the "dissolution" of the union high school district. There would then be only district no. 1 in Bend, for both grade and high schools. But this would make changes in our tax structure which could be the cause of financial complications.

3. Defeat the bill. This really shouldn't be done. We think it's a good bill and we should be able to solve our own special case without endeavoring to destroy something that we believe will be generally desirable.

American House was mentloned. She had found things worse, really, than she had expected. Provisions had been bought by wholessile, and both the cellar and the storeroom were stocked with perishables—meat, eggs, butter barrels of crackers, a crate of oranges, and two whole bunches of binanas. ## LETTER TO HENRY J. KAISER

Dear Mr. Kaiser:

I read in my local newspaper that the President has asked you to head a gigantic drive for clothing.

Mr. Kaiser, you should set up a special week, to be known as "Clean Out Your Clothes Closet Week". You should turn on this week such a blast of publicity as to practically force every woman and girl in the land to go through her clothes closets and give up every acticle of clothing that isn't AC TUALLY IN USE NOW!

I am a housewife myself, and I am speaking straight from my own clothes closet, as it were. Like every other housewife, I answer periodical pleas for clothing. I take things out, view them: I row all angles, weigh the matter pro and con, knaw my knuckles, finally actually give up something, and then feel that I have dene my bit.

But—and this is the point. Mr. Kaiser—I put back a dozen articles of clothins that I lack the intestinal for it it de, for some reason or other, to give up. And every other housewife in the country is right in the same boat!

It is woman's nature tohoard clothes against some mythical "rainy day"; or because, while they're out of style right now, a little remodelling will fix them up.

eating heartily) and set out to find local people to take their places. The first fruit of her search was Mrs. Guptill, a widow from a neighboring village.

Given only Mrs. Cuptill to reck on with, my father might have been well on his feet before the summer was over. Her industry was a thing to marvel at. She was up at 5 every morning and by 5:30 she had the fire going, the Fettle boiling, the biscuits cut, the bacon and beefsteak brought in from the cellar, and the fish rolled in corn meal, ready for frying. By a quarter to 6 she was rattling the dumb-waiter, furning at people with the cellar forms. ple who thought only of their ber and board. She herself lived an

As a demonstration of American public opinion expressing itself by insisting that the statesmen get together and form an organization that will stop war, this 42-act greater combined lobby of counsellors can exert a wholesome influence. But if the boys and girls get the idea that they are going to San Francisco to put over pet projects, to insist on patented panaceas of their own preparation, to stage demonstrations and raise holy Ned if their private, picayunish perfectionism is not followed to the last data. In the name of peace, sweet peace, they ought to stay home. As a demonstration of Amer-
