SHIPS TOPS IN COMFORT

London (U)—"Best ship in the British merchant navy," is the way the Kingfisher, a 541-ton cargo ship was described by her captain, Charles Gracie. Besides having a superb kitchen, she has a cabin for each man, with spring mattress, folding bed, and gay rush matting on the floor. There are shower baths, and drying rooms for sea-sprayed clothes. This is only part of "a sailor's dream come true," designed for the comfort of its crew. Two of her lifeboats have motors, and all are launched from mechanical davits. She rode the winter gales like a cork.
