

Americans Told They Face Fight Against Hunger

By Lee Nichols (United Press Staff Correspondent) Washington, May 1 (UP)—Americans were told bluntly and without equivocation today that they face a new battle against hunger on which the future peace of the world may well depend. A bleak picture of the starvation facing Europe and the leaner fare awaiting this nation was coupled with an appeal for more production and a united front on the new world economic crisis that has arisen with the approach of the end of the European war. Here are the developments that brought out the full nature of the seriousness of the world food situation:

Developments Listed
1. Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, who made a tour of liberated areas of northwest Europe at the direction of the late President Roosevelt, told President Truman that the economic problems of those areas are "extremely serious."
He said a "realistic appraisal" indicated that the U. S. will have the task of providing a "substantial share" of most civilian supplies including food, and urged a widespread campaign to acquaint the people with the gravity of the situation and the need for reduced food rations here to meet our "responsibilities."
2. American, Canadian and British food officials, who have been conferring here on joint problems, declared in a statement that United Nations requirements are higher this year and supplies lower than they have been before and that the problem will extend into 1946.
Up To America
"Describing the food problem as 'another common struggle which must be won,' the official said, 'either the United Nations must find the answers... or millions of persons throughout the world will meet disillusionment and disappointment in the wake of victory.'"
3. Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, D., Mont., a member of the senate committee investigating this country's food situation, said he had been told matters in Europe are so desperate that 1,500,000 persons may starve to death this year. He said the food situation here will grow worse before it gets better.
4. Chairman Leo T. Crowley of the U. S. committee on foreign shipments reported that American civilians will get less food this year than they did last, but promised a "decent American diet" will be maintained. He said military requirements would go up from 13 to 16 per cent of total supplies,
