

Action By Big Four on Plans For Revision of Dumbarton Oaks Proposal Meets Delay

BY R. H. SHACKFORD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

San Francisco, May 5 (UP)—A United Big Four front on amendments to the Dumbarton Oaks proposals for a world organization was delayed for at least 24 hours today by the Soviet Union.

The Russians asked for 24 hours before committing themselves on amendments pertaining to revision of treaties and regional arrangements. The other members of the Big Four—the United States, Great Britain and China, agreed to submit separate but identical recommendations on those issues.

Fifteen minutes before last night's deadline the Big Four agreed to make joint recommendations to the United Nations conference on all their other amendments.

The treaty revision amendment was sponsored by Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg, R., Mich., and would have authorized the proposed general assembly to recommend post-war revisions of any treaty when it deemed them appropriate.

Russians Oppose Move
The regional arrangements involve such bilateral mutual aid treaties as signed by Russia and France and whether they should be subject to control of the world organization. We say yes; the Russians no.

Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., called a press conference for 9:30 a. m. PWT, today at which he was expected to announce not only the amendments which all the Big Four will sponsor jointly, but those on which the big powers minus Russia will submit separately.

Secret Big Four consultations reached a climax last night in Stettinius' penthouse apartment. For three days the Big Powers have been trying to reach agreement on the amendments to the proposed plan they framed last summer at Dumbarton Oaks.

Delegates Optimistic
Despite the Russian request for a delay on two major points, participants in last night's session were "very enthusiastic" about the results. They were optimistic about eventual Russian approval of even the recommendations on the touchy problems of treaty revision and regional arrangements.

It was pointed out that Russia had agreed in principle on those points but apparently wished to check with Premier Josef Stalin before giving a final okay.

One of the major amendments proposed by the United States pertained to the functions and powers of the assembly. Sponsored by Vandenberg, it would have permitted the assembly to make recommendations on revision of treaties or international engagements whenever it found that they imperiled the general welfare.

Would Broaden Rules
The revised amendment—agreed to by all except Russia—was said to strike out all reference to treaties and to substitute language which will apply to any "situation" that would arise in the postwar world. All of the Big Four except Russia submitted identical amendments on this last night and it was believed that Russia will make it unanimous after consultation with Moscow.

The second point on which Russia could not immediately agree involved such regional two-way treaties as Russia has with France, Britain, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and, within the last few weeks, the Warsaw Poles.

Those Russian treaties run for 20 years and call for mutual assistance in event of aggression by Germans or any of Germany's satellites during this war.

The United States was understood to want to bring those treaties within the scope and framework of the world organization.

Opinions Differ
One major unsettled issue was not discussed at last night's meeting—the question of international trusteeships on which there is sharp difference of opinion between the United States and Great Britain.

A special Big Five subcommittee, including France, has been working on that problem this week and will meet again tonight to try to reconcile differences.

The British beat the United States to the gun late yesterday on that issue by making public their plan for international trusteeships to replace the old league's mandate system for dependent peoples, although the U. S. plan has not been officially announced, its broad outlines are known.

Hannegan Target Of Party Attack
Washington, May 5 (UP)—Hints were raised today that charges of political corruption may be leveled at democratic national Chairman Robert E. Hannegan by a group of republicans seeking to block his confirmation as postmaster general of the U. S.

A fight is definitely shaping up, spearheaded by a number of GOP senators who fear Hannegan will use his job to organize for President Truman a well-gearred political machine as the one that four times delivered the presidency to the late Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The fight against Hannegan is expected to start out as something of a family battle. Hannegan is from Missouri and he was nominated by Missouri-born President Truman.

Missouri's republican senator, Forrest C. Donnell, is slated to fire the opening gun when the senate meets on the nomination on Monday. Missouri's democratic senator, Frank Briggs, is expected to be on hand to reply.

Donnell reportedly will move that the nomination be recommitted to the post office committee for hearings on "certain matters, possibly indicating corruption" in connection with Hannegan's political record.

The foreign secretary has reported this most serious development to his master's government and has informed M. Molotov that meanwhile he cannot continue discussions on the Polish issue.

saw provisional government and with Polish democratic political leaders from within Poland and from abroad.

"We have asked Mr. Molotov for a complete list of the names of these Polish political leaders who have been arrested and a full explanation of this action. Further discussions must await a reply."

Eden's statement was in almost identical terms.

It said that "Mr. Eden and Mr. Stettinius immediately expressed their grave concern to Mr. Molotov at receiving his most disquieting information after so long a delay and asked him to obtain a full explanation concerning the arrest of these Polish leaders, a complete list of their names and news of their present whereabouts."

The foreign secretary has reported this most serious development to his master's government and has informed M. Molotov that meanwhile he cannot continue discussions on the Polish issue.

Geographic Scribe Will Pass Up Bend

Portland, Ore., May 5 (UP)—Leo A. Borah, editorial staff member of National Geographic, today begins a state tour of Oregon to gather material for a descriptive article, accompanied with color photographs.

Borah has spent many years in the Pacific northwest, as director for five years of the University of Washington school of journalism, and as editorial staff member of the Spokane Spokesman-Review.

He was unable to say when the story will appear. A story on Nebraska written a year ago appears in the May issue—indicating the time lag between completion and appearance the Oregon story may draw.

Shipyards will be mentioned but will not be played up, he said. More permanent industries, and Oregon people, will lead. The writer will not stop at Bend's master scenery, nor Wallowa's lakes, but will take the back roads through ghost towns, homesteaders' donation claims, and the high desert, he said.

The boy was born in White Salmon, Wash. Funeral services will be held Tuesday.
