UNDER THE LIFELESS LINDENS
Editor's note—The writer of the paragraphs which follow is James E. Brinton, Bulletin staff member, now with the American forces in Europe.

The linden trees in spring are beautiful. As the warm, long days begin, their branches first become lacy with tiny leaves. Then the bright green grows thicker and deeper as the leaves enlarge, until only specks of the pale blue sky can be seen above. Many such springs these lindens saw.

But the lindens on Wilhelmstrasse in this German city are not green this spring. Neither are they budding and bursting green on Hindenburgstrasse or Kaiserstrasse.

The lindens are dead on the street bearing the suppose.

The lindens are dead on the streets bearing the names of the "greatest" Germans. The heat from the burning buildings was too great and their tiny winter buds were roasted black, their outer bark baked to charcoal. When spring spread along the Rhine, and spring along the Rhine is as beautiful as spring along the Deschutes or the Willamette, the lindens did not waken. Their blackened bark peeled away leaving trunks of bonelike white, their branches remained an ebony lattice against the sky—but there was no sign of green.

Three times the lindens had shaken to the march of German armies bent on conquering Europe or the world. Twice they were alive when the armies returned, once in victory and once in defeat. But the third time the lindens did not see the broken Nazi columns fall back on their way to defeat.

Perhaps it is well that the lindens died in their winter's sleep, for there is no need of shade on Wilhelmstrasse and the beauty of the lindens would only be wasted among the mounds of rubble heaped about their dead trunks.

In the years to come there will be new linden trees, and then what happened "unter den Linden" and what happened to the lindens must never be let to happen again.

IT FAILS TO DECEIVE
There is cause for amusement, not unmixed with resentment in the rigmarole that is coming out of Germany as V-E day nears and in the routine which is being followed as Germany sets about donning its waiting suit of sheep's clothing. There is amusement at the transparency of the expected at-

There is amusement at the transparency of the content tempt to achieve relative respectability; there is resentment that those who conceived these tactics of deception should think us so stupid as to be deceived by them.

The transition scene had its beginning with the avowals by prisoners and by civilians in occupied areas of opposition to nazi beliefs and nazi methods. It continued as Hermann Goering became indisposed, as something happened to Hitler—up to date he has been slain in battle, has gone mad, is dying of cerebral hemorrhage. Now Heinrich Himmler has faded from the picture and finally a brand-new fuehrer appears—Admiral Karl Doenitz, who is intensively publicized as not a nazi. He, it seems, is cast for the role of chief sheep. He is merely a top man in the German warrior clique.

As the summer passed, Mr. Cutter ate more, slept more, and worked less, Any hour of the day you might find him dozing on his stool, his face supported by his stool, his face supported by his bulging. "A slow-poke, am 1?" His face would get red and his breath come hard. Sometimes he would plek up his pen and not wouldn't stop until the water was down, and have wearly harassed look as if to say he would come when he could ever get clear of what he was doling. Half an hour later, when you went again, you couldn't find him.

He began to yet irritance. One would ask, scizing her wrists, "I don't hear very good tonight."

All this window dressing is silly. It will fool nobody aside from the German themselves. The war is going on just the same. Armies are surrendering, German war criminals are same. Armies are surrendering, German war criminals are still badly wanted and at least some of the allies have no intention of accepting a Hitler death report until they have scientifically identified the body. Once that is done he will cease to have any more importance than is now attached to the late Signor Mussolini.

to have any more importance than is now attached to the late Signor Mussolini.

The nations will continue to deal with Germany, regardless of who may ostensibly be at the head of what passes for a German government. It is they who will make the terms—after the surrender, if there is one, or upon completion of conquest. Any difference between these two ways of ending the war is to be viewed as theoretical only.
