

Two Convicted on Bribery Count

New York, May 10 (AP)—The conviction of Harvey Stemmer and Henry Rosen for conspiracy and bribing of five Brooklyn college basketball players, was cited today by Judge Louis Goldstein as a warning to "those chiseling and crooked gamblers who infest our proud city that New York is not a safe place to operate."

Stemmer and Rosen were found guilty by a jury of eight men and four women after five hours of deliberation last night. The jury recommended leniency for Rosen, who acted as a go-between in the deal with the players to "fix" a game with Akron university at Boston on Jan. 31.

Stemmer promptly was sentenced to a year in the penitentiary and fined $500 with the proviso that he serve an extra day for each dollar of the fine that he failed to pay. Rosen will be sentenced on May 16.

The men went on trial in Kings county court Monday under an indictment which charged that they conspired with an unidentified third person known only as "Danny" to cheat and defraud persons betting on the game which was played.

Goldstein denounced Stemmer and Rosen as "unworthy citizens of the community." "You bribed these fine American boys of excellent character and reputation," he said. "You brought disgrace and humiliation to these young men and upon one of our leading amateur sports. You also brought shame and dishonor upon one of the leading schools of education in the country."

Talk on Veterans To Be Broadcast

Challenging the theory that 12 million returning veterans will need to be taught how to act as civilians, Ray Cooper will deliver the 54th in a series of "Speak Up for Democracy" talks to be broadcast over station KBND at 7:00 p. m. on Friday, May 11. The series of monthly patriotic talks is sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"We believe the time has come to debunk the idea that returning veterans will be anti-social and antagonistic toward all civilians," declared Cooper. "Many of the ideas being publicized are actually frightening to parents and wives. They are naturally alarmed when told their sons and husbands will come home greatly changed in basic character and personality."

Deschutes Library Workshop To Be Held in Bend Saturday

Thirty or more county librarians and others in Oregon interested in county library work will meet in Bend Saturday, May 12, for the annual county library workshop under the direction of Miss Eleanor Stephens, Oregon state librarian. The Deschutes county library will act as host for the occasion, but the morning session will be held in the Episcopal parish hall, and the afternoon session in the Bend high school library, due to the absence of a suitable place in the library building at present.

Problems of administration, book stock and book selection, budgets and financing, county library boards, personnel, salaries, relationships between schools and libraries, and postwar planning are already on the roster for discussion and others are expected to be added. Miss Maryann Reynolds, field worker and assistant to the Washington state librarian, will be a special guest and will aid in the discussions.

The conference will open with a round table meeting at 9 a. m. At 1 p. m. a luncheon will be held at the Pine Tavern, and a feature of the afternoon session will be the showing of a color film on county library work in the rural areas of Texas. At the close of the session a tea will be given at the Deschutes county library for all those present who can remain over to attend.

Another feature will be the presence of the Clackamas county bookmobile, or traveling library on wheels, which will arrive in Bend this evening, piloted by Miss Martha Hansen, Clackamas county librarian. The bookmobile will make a demonstration run in Deschutes county on Friday, visiting one nearby station and school at Tumalo, and will be inspected by members of the Deschutes county library board, the county court and members of the city council. Board members and county librarians interested in adding bookmobile service in their counties after the war are expected to inspect the mobile unit while it is parked in front of the library on Saturday.

Among the counties to be represented are Baker, Benton, Clackamas, Clatsop, Deschutes, Hood River, Jackson, Klamath, Lake, Lane, Malheur, Marion, Umatilla, Union and Wasco. Miss Nell Unger, librarian of the Portland Library association and Multnomah county, will represent that organization, and there will be four representatives from the Oregon state library.

Mrs. Maida Bailey, member of the state library board and the Deschutes county library board, will pour at the afternoon tea, which will be strictly informal. A committee composed of Miss Edith Brown and Mrs. Ann Sawyer from the Deschutes county library are in charge of the local arrangements.

Prineville Holds Two Celebrations

Prineville, May 10 (Special)—Prineville as well as New York City, was a little premature Monday in celebrating V-day. Fired by radio news of surrender in Germany, somebody jumped the gun and ordered the fire siren to be blown. This had previously been agreed upon as a signal that V-day was here. Following this and a broadcast on the "Prineville Hour" by Mayor May Barney, most business houses, some of the mills and the schools were closed.

At the high school before closing Principal Dallas Norton called an assembly appropriately to solemnize the occasion. The national anthem and other appropriate songs were sung, and Rev. Edward H. Cook, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal church, and Attorney D. H. Graham, past commander of American Legion post 29, spoke briefly.

The more conservative awaited the official announcement Tuesday and though the observance of the real V-E day was less jubilant, the significance of it was doubtless more thoughtful.

In the evening at 8 o'clock, religious services were held in the Community church, sponsored by the united churches and Masons and Eastern Star organizations. The principal speakers were Mrs. Carey Foster, worthy grand matron of the grand chapter of Oregon; R. P. McRae, master of the local Masonic lodge, and Rev. W. N. Byars of the Community church.

"PP&L keeps on giving us more and more for our money" says J. A. Shupe, Northern Pacific Locomotive Engineer of Pasco, Wash.

"Nearly 30 years ago, we bought one of the very first electric ranges in Pasco. It was so marvelous that the man who sold it to us asked for a picture of our kitchen. Of course, it was nothing like the modern electric kitchen we have today—but eight of our friends went out and bought electric ranges when they learned from us how easy it was to cook with electricity.

"That was just a few years after PP&L came to Pasco in 1910. Since then we have added just about everything there is in the way of household electric equipment. And PP&L has been cutting the price of electricity faster than we have been adding new appliances, so that today service for our all-electric home costs us only half the amount we once paid to use our electric range and a few lights."

J. A. Shupe, veteran railroad engineer, came to Pasco from Kansas in 1904 to take a job as a fire-cleaner in the Pasco Northern Pacific roundhouse. He became successively a fireman on a switch-yard engine, freight engineer, and passenger engineer—and now pilots one of the big Class A-3 passenger locomotives between Pasco and Spokane.

Mr. Shupe recalls the many advances in railroading since he first went to work for Northern Pacific. Trains are bigger, faster, safer; tracks are twice as heavy; and steel construction has replaced wood to make the cars bigger and stronger.

The first locomotive Mr. Shupe drove had an oil head lamp and oil lamps in the cars. Now electricity not only lights the trains, but operates the block signals and handles many a difficult job that used to be done manually.
