other nations reacted quoting Englishman Walter Durante as saying that he was more interested in the trade his group had in Japan than in stopping any aggression.

Mussolini declared a national holiday to celebrate the United States' signing of the neutrality act, he continued, and within 12 days the Italian army was on its way to Ethiopia. Then came Hitler's occupation of Austria, the Sudenland, Czechoslovakia and Poland.

"We had to support our friends," Dr. Strand said, "It would have been the blackest disgrace in the history of world affairs if we had failed our allies."

Lauds Conference The speaker was optimistic about the progress of the San Francisco conference, and expressed the hope that out of the proposals an organization will emerge embracing the principles set down at Dumbarton Oaks. "There isn't any peace to write, except agreements between the victors," he said. "There is no way to bring war criminals to justice, because justice is founded only on law, and there is no international law."

Dr. Strand left this morning for Burns, where he is scheduled to speak today, continuing his tour of the state.
