Bend Makes Plans for 1945 Mother's Day Observance

With V-E day a reality and many homes cheered by news that their boys may soon be home, Bend is making preparations for the most hopeful Mother's day in four years. Special services will be held Sunday in the churches, which expect near capacity congregations.

The local telephone company, anticipating a rush occasioned by long-distance calls from service men and women in bases scattered the length and breadth of the nation, have employed extra help for the day. The board expects to be able to handle the extra toll easily, as in past years, as no problem is presented locally by the increased activity of long-distance lines.

Numerous Bend folk have planned week-end trips to other points in the state, and some will entertain out-of-town guests, although there will be less traveling than usual because of war-time restrictions. Realizing that service personnel deserve preference on clogged transportation lanes, most people will send felicitations by mail or telegraph, or greet Mothers far away with long-distance telephone calls.

Entertaining the past week has taken a Mother's day trend, with several parties using this theme. Several lodge groups have had guests for mothers, and the beginners' day entertainments and music week observances at the schools have included mother-tributes on the programs.
