County Budget

would be held, however, until the amended law allowing up to $25,000 is again amended, as J. S. Davis, appearing with Ray Cooper in behalf of the appropriation, assured the committee that it would be. An attorney general's opinion received yesterday advised the county that a memorial appropriation could be made for only one city. The intention had been to provide $15,000 for Bend and $10,000 for Redmond. A special session of the legislature Davis predicted, would rewrite the law in the plural. The county court members of the budget committee declared their intention to wait and see if such action is taken before disbursing money collected for the memorial.

Total expense budget at the close of last night's meeting was $233,845.74. The estimated levy would be nearly $159,000. This took into consideration an estimated $33,125 cash on hand in the general fund. Computation of fees, tax collection losses, back tax collections and discounts could still allow an increase in the hospital appropriation or force its further reduction.

Only slight changes were made in the budget aside from this one post-war item. The library board using more of its reserve than it had contemplated using, submitted a revised budget adding an $1800 bookmobile to expense items, but requiring an increase of only $186 from the county. Revised, the figure stood at $7,380. A request from the assessor for $200 more for office help was allowed, bringing the general fund budget to $122,514.84.

Delegation Attends
A delegation of local sportsmen—George Simerville, W. E. Jossy and Lloyd Magill—attended to give the budget makers support, if needed, on the stock and game protection item of $3,000. Miss Olive Jameson, welfare director, at the request of the county judge gave figures on aged pensioners now cared for locally.

All members of the budget committee attended the meeting. County Judge C. L. Allen and Commissioners E. E. Varco and A. E. Stevens for the county and advisory board members A. J. Glassow, M. A. Lynch and John Hohmstein.

Girls To Sell War Bonds At Theater
Creating a place where purchasers of Seventh war loan bonds might obtain them at night, members of the Beta Sigma Phi sorority have established a booth at the Capitol theater, it was announced today. B. A. Stover, operator of the theater, said that the booth is the only place available to night purchasers, and that he anticipated "landslide sales" by the sorority girls at the stand.

Bonds may be bought at the theater booth before and after the show, the girls being on hand from before 7 p. m. to 9 o'clock.

Elks Dance to Feature Portland Floor Show

upon measures to meet the air raid threat, Tokyo said.

Suzuki and two other cabinet ministers had visited the palace immediately after the raid "to ascertain the whereabouts of installations and personnel," a broadcast said.

Palace Razed
A Japanese communique said the "front" or outer palace and other buildings within Hirohito's palace compound were burned down. It also conceded "considerable damage" elsewhere in the city.

A Japanese Domei dispatch said Suzuki told the cabinet that after seeing the imperial palace catch fire, he had approached Hirohito "humble in my trepidation as a humble servant of his imperial majesty."

At the same time, Suzuki said, he could not help but renew his determination to "smash this enemy of humanity and to defend his majesty to the last."

"I firmly believe that the people of this nation equally share my feelings toward the entire American nation," he said.

Gale Whips Fire
The enemy account said huge conflagrations, whipped by a 70-mile-an-hour gale, turned vast industrial, business and residential sections of Tokyo into "blazing infernos" and destroyed numerous landmarks.

Civilians, old and young alike, turned out to help fight the fires, which apparently still were raging more than 18 hours after the start of the raid.

Transportation facilities were "temporarily interrupted," Tokyo said.

$50,000 Restored To Deschutes Unit

On the representation that the removal of $50,000 from the bureau of reclamation budget for the North Unit irrigation project would seriously hamper the delivery of Deschutes water to Jefferson county, the senate appropriations committee has agreed to restore the sum, according to a telegram received by The Bulletin today from Senator Guy Cordon.

The house had eliminated the $50,000 over the protest of Congressman Lowell Stockman. Before the senate appropriations committee, Senator Cordon had resumed the battle to have the sum restored.

COUNTY CLERK'S OFFICE
Honorable discharges were filed today and Friday at the county clerk's office by the following: John Opal Milleson, navy; Frank Barton Opydke, navy; and Ronald Belnap Ballantyne, navy. A marriage license was issued by the county clerk today to Lowell Preston Gibson and Shirley Ann Hasson, both of Bend.
