

Indian Renegades Are Broken Up, British Announce

By P. D. Sharma
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
New Delhi, June 4 (UP)—The puppet army of 35,000 Indian renegades who deserted to the Japanese when Singapore fell in 1942 finally has been scattered and virtually disbanded after three years of futile effort to stir India to revolt.

With the dissolution of the traitor force, British military authorities permitted correspondents to reveal for the first time the full story of the formation and fall of this "Indian national army" that was raised to "liberate" India for the Japanese.

Actually, the army fought only one small campaign, early in 1944, when it joined the Japanese in the unsuccessful invasion of India's Manipur province. The Indian revolt, many of their officers surrendered to the British, and the movement finally fell apart.

Officer Gets Blame
The puppet army actually was initiated by an obscure Sikh officer of the 14th Punjab regiment, a Capt. Mohan Singh, who was captured by the Japanese when Singapore fell on Feb. 15, 1942.

On the same day, Singh began recruiting his fellow-captives with a view to fighting; the British-Indian armies alongside the Japanese and instigating other Indian troops to desert.

By November, 1942, however, Singh had been replaced at the head of the army by Ras Behari Bose, a prominent Indian revolutionary who had been living in Japan since 1915 after throwing a bomb at Lord Hardinge, then viceroy of India.

Bose claimed to have enlisted 16,000 of the 70,000 Indian soldiers taken by the Japanese and the movement was gathering strength. In December, 1942, however, it was disbanded suddenly by the Japanese after Bose arrested Singh for permitting his aides to communicate with the British authorities in India.

Army Revived
It was revived again in June, 1943, when another and more zealous Indian renegade reached the Far East. He was Subhas Chandra Bose, Indian left wing leader and one-time president of the Indian congress, who was expelled by Mohandas Gandhi and fled to Berlin.

Immediately on his arrival in Japanese-occupied territory, Subhas Bose ousted Behari Bose from the leadership of the Indian independence league and began an active propaganda campaign to raise money and recruits for the national army.

Subhas Bose's forces suffered their heaviest defeat at the end of April, 1944, when they were caught with the Japanese in Manipur province. Several hundred of their officers and men were killed or captured there, and in the subsequent retreat into Burma they lost hundreds more.

Bose made a last attempt to revive his prestige with the Japanese in the final stages of the central Burma campaign, but he failed dismally and his forces broke up. Later, rumors reached India that he had died in exile.

East Coast Sub Attacks Costly

Cape Hatteras, N. C., June 4 (UP)—The story of the submarine battle of the Atlantic seaboard may now be told. It's the story of the loss of 27 allied vessels in 177 days to German U-boats.

The German U-boat attempts to destroy shipping along the coast began on the 43rd night after Pearl Harbor. The American freighter "City of Atlanta" steamed northward off Chincoteague coast guard station. Her lights were out and her radio was silent.

Before nightfall she had been sighted from Cape Hatteras. Her position and course was relayed to stations along the beach. And from towers along the beach, coast guardsmen kept alert for some sign of her passing.

With deep darkness over the Atlantic, came the thudding roar of an explosion. The ship had been torpedoed. This was the beginning of 177 days in which an aggregate tonnage of 109,795 tons were sunk within sight of this light-house.

Flames Light Skies
There followed night after night in which the skies were lighted with the flames of burning ships.

Five days after this first sinking the Germans bagged their biggest prize. She was the British tanker "Empire City," carrying 10,600 tons of gasoline. The light from the fires of this ship was visible for 50 miles. The roar of the explosion was heard 75 miles in shore.

With the coming of March, the Germans intensified their activity. During this one month, 13 ships met their doom in the space of 18 days. And it was reported that on one night nine burning ships were visible.

Marine Is Cited For Island Fight

A copy of the presidential citation given to the Fourth marine division for its "outstanding performance" in the Marianas campaign, was received here today by Mrs. Carl H. Anderson, 23 Minnesota avenue, whose son, Pfc. Gustav Adolph Anderson was killed in action last July 28. The citation was accompanied by a placard of transmittal, addressed to "Your loved one and our beloved comrade," which was signed by Maj. Gen. C. B. Cates, commanding the Fourth marine division.

The presidential citation was signed by James Forrestal, secretary of the navy, for the president, and said in part: "For outstanding performance in the seizure of Saipan and Tinian in the Marianas from June 15 to August 1, 1944, during which time you pushed relentlessly across Saipan for 25 days, and after a brief rest, expanded the beachheads on Tinian."

Raid By Doolittle Held No Surprise

Portland, Ore., June 4 (UP)—The Japs were expecting that Doolittle air raid on Tokyo in 1942, Col. K. S. Himatsinhji of the Indian army said here today.

Himatsinhji, with the agency general for India in Washington, D. C., as military liaison officer, gleefully stood on the roof of the British embassy in Tokyo and watched those land planes come in after their flight from a carrier.

He said that warning of the impending raid had been received the night before the attack, presumably from the small ship the American force sighted and sank 800 miles from Japan. At that time he was first secretary at the embassy.
