WASTE AND HIGH TAXES Lower federal taxes on incomes have been assured for 1946 by the passage of the new revenue act. They are not much lower, it is true, but the reduction will be noticeable.

It will not do, however, to forget for a minute that, in the years since Pearl Harbor and indeed in the years preceding, the government of the United States has succeeded in piling up a national debt of approximately three hundred billion dollars.

Some of these have to do with lavish use and downright waste of material. Some have to do with the growth of bureaucracy. Frequently the two go hand in hand. Both constitute extravagance. The taxpayer, of course, pays the bill.

Just as an example of what could be done there is the case of the office of Indian affairs. On this one payroll are 7,619 persons, or one bureaucrat to every 43 Indians.

This is but one example. Others could be cited, far too many of them, in fact. The office of Indian affairs is typical in the fact that it continues after the need for it has diminished or even ceased to be.

Bureaus, in the main, are self-perpetuating. They grow like weeds and political patronage supplies the fertilizer to stimulate additional growth.

There will be a shrinkage, of course, in government payroll. It is already under way, but it is not progressing in proportion to the decreasing requirements.

Lacking the inauguration of such a policy there is little chance of another noticeable cut in tax rates.

ENTRENCHMENT IN ITALY

General Eisenhower and his ground force commander, General Alexander, fully anticipated that they were in for a heavy fight at the foot of the Italian boot. They had estimated that eight German divisions were available to oppose the landings.

The narrow margin on which we were compelled to allocate our resources so that Germany might be defeated at the earliest possible moment required superhuman effort by troops and commanders. Every available combat aircraft of both the tactical and the strategic air forces was thrown into the action.

Value Of Co-ordination

"Our worse problem is 'Avalanche' it itself. We have been unable to advance and the enemy is preparing a major counterattack. The 45th division is largely in the area now and I am using everything we have bigger than a row boat to get the 3d division in to Clark quickly.

On 16 September, patrols of the Fifth and Eighth armies met 40 miles southeast of Salerno uniting the fronts of General Alexander's Fifteenth army group. The critical phase of the Italian campaign had ended.

Do you know what's missing from this picture?

If you're waiting for a telephone, what isn't in this picture may be far more important than what you see. For although we are now getting and installing thousands of new telephone instruments, even more orders for service are being held up (and this may be the case with you) by a shortage of other facilities that take longer to build.

In many places, for example, we will have to build complicated new switchboards before we can provide telephone service... in others, we will even have to put up new buildings to house those switchboards.

But we are working full speed ahead, and no matter what the conditions are that are holding up your telephone, you can be certain we are doing everything we can to get to your name on the waiting list just as swiftly as possible.
