IT MEANS HIGHER TAXES
A letter from Mrs. Una B. Inch, president of the Oregon education association, asks for a clarification of statements recently made in this column regarding the initiated measure.

The basic school support fund bill provides for a state property tax, outside the six per cent limitation, to produce $50 for each child of school age in Oregon.

And it would be an addition; make no mistake about that. Proponents of the measure are making some capital of the fact that the basic school support fund would replace the present school support fund.

Argument for the measure, as given in the voters' pamphlet lays considerable stress on financing the school program with state funds.

As so frequently develops when the subject of school support comes up, affirmative argument for the bill draws disparaging comparisons between Oregon and its neighbor states, Washington and California.

Marked on the ballot, this would read: 317 (X) No. 1 vote against the proposed measure.

A newspaper headline says: "Fewer Crashes Sought By Aeronautics Experts." Something like only one a week, we suppose, instead of the present rate.

Washington Column

By Peter Edson (NEA Washington Correspondent)

Washington, Oct. 21 — In the year and eight months that James F. Byrnes of Spartanburg, S. C., has been secretary of state, he has been away from his desk over eight months, but not on vacation.

The anvil chorus of criticism is already clanging at the Byrnes record. This being an election year, the republicans are trying to make something of it, though foreign policy is supposed to be non-partisan bi-partisan affair—no peace treaties signed. Nothing settled except the loan to Britain.

Any fair appraisal of Jimmy Byrnes however, must include a list of good starts. The war having thrown the whole world into confusion for over five years. It would be impossible for even a republican to bring order out of the chaos in a little over a year.

Actually, there have been no great changes from the foreign policy objectives laid down by Cordell Hull. There are no new policies that can be definitely ticketed as by James F. Byrnes.

A total of 2,085 children were enrolled in Bend schools the first of this month compared with 1,930 at the same date last year.

It is a popular belief that Byrnes was thrown into foreign affairs cold and inexperienced, and that this accounts for his early set backs at Paris and London and Moscow.

Twenty-five years ago (October 21, 1921)
Frank B. Ebbert, associate attorney for the Anti-Saloon league which was instrumental in securing the passage of the Volstead act, will speak in Bend October 25.

The Children & Armstrong confectionery will move its new quarters in the Warner building on Wall street next week.

An odorless sterilizer, which sterilized army surgical instruments without heat, is now available for use in restaurants, dairies, hospitals and other civilian buildings.

Reports that Byrnes will resign are to be discounted, unless his health fails completely. He is not a quitter.

Government control, policy matters, and housing shortages will highlight the three-day session, spokesman said. The convention is headed by S. Lamar Forrest, Lubbock, Tex.

Seattle, Oct. 21 (AP)—Over 2,600 lumbermen from across the country met today to discuss housing problems at the opening session of the first big postwar meeting of the National Retail Lumber Dealers association.

MORE SUPPORT FOR P. T. A.

Bend, Oct. 18, 1946

To The Editor:
Being the parents of two school age children my wife and I are very interested in P. T. A. With the new methods of teaching we feel it is essential that parents have some way, other than through their children, of knowing how they are being taught and how they are supposed to study.

While on the subject of schools may I add that I have played in, officiated, and witnessed many high school games in the past fifteen years. While attending the high school games in Bend this fall I was very surprised to see one of the officials smoking on the field. In my past experiences I have never heard of an official smoking while on the field of play.

Is the answer Bend needs a P. T. A.
Yours Truly
