Vet Builds Backyard Honeymoon Cottage

Auburn, Ala. (AP)—Marine veteran Richard Barr, of Banks, Ala., had a new bride, a desire for a college education and $500.

His schooling he could get via the GI bill. But where was he to put his bride. Dick solved the problem here in five days.

First he bought $350 worth of lumber. Then he found an Auburn family who agreed to let him build in their backyard and paid for the plumbing fixtures, in exchange for the house when Barr finished school.

Then with his brother-in-law and two friends, he pitched in. They paid a carpenter $75 for some work which they couldn't do, and another $30 for electrical work.

When his bride arrived in less than a week, she found a complete 20 by 14 foot home, with combination bedroom, sitting room, kitchen, bath and closet, plus electric lights and running water.

Relatives donated the furniture. Today the Barrs are the envy of other married GI couples on the API campus.

SKIDS ON OIL SLICK

Boston (AP)—Range oil which was spilled when a truck and bus were in collision caused a second accident a few minutes later. The oil spread over the street, causing a second truck to skid and crash into a parked automobile. The driver of the second truck was the only person injured.
