

Rampant River Floods Fairbanks; Dikes Are Erected

Fairbanks, Alaska, May 21 (AP)—Scores of small boats worked steadily to evacuate residents here today after the swollen Chena river poured over its banks covering this city with a muddy five-foot deep lake.

Homes in the lower areas of the town were flooded to the rooftops. Many residents of Fairbanks were marooned on the roofs as the river continued rising.

Soldiers worked through the night building a dike of sandbags around Ladd field, major Alaska air force base.

Nenana Suffers

South of Fairbanks the Tenana poured through the town of Nenana. Nenana was without fresh water after the flood polluted the town's water supply.

The water cut off Fairbanks from the Alaska highway but a train moving on rails covered by water reached the city late last night. The train was sent to Nenana with a tank-car of fresh water. No word was received here as to whether it had arrived safely.

Fairbanks city manager James Wilcox said at least 30 square blocks of the city were under water. United States geodetic survey officials said the rivers were still rising at the rate of one-half-inch per hour.

Roofs Used

Roof tops were strewn with furniture, clothing and other possessions of the occupants. One resident pitched a tent on the roof of his house.

Geodetic survey officials said that most of the snow feeding the rivers had melted and flood waters should reach their crest today or tomorrow.

O.S.C. Students Visit Midstate

Cloverdale, May 21 (Special)—The fields crop class of Oregon State college visited the King brothers' farm this past week, as part of a tour which had taken the group up the Columbia river and to eastern Oregon as far as Baker, before coming to Central Oregon.

Dr. Donald D. Hill, professor of farm crops at the college, was in charge of the group. County agent Gene Lear and Malcolm Johnson, project leader, accompanied the group on the local visit.

Crops in the local area seemed more advanced than those in any other section the class had visited. Dr. Hill observed. He also expressed concern about this season's hay crop, fearing that it will be unusually short.

Charles H. Trachsel, an Oregon State student who was a member of the group, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Trachsel, of Desert Springs ranch, while the group was in this area.

JACK in the CORNER

General Robert E. Wood, head of Sears, Roebuck & Company, is working on a plan to give Chicago boys a chance at country life. He is setting up a group of little "farms," where kids who think milk comes only in bottles can get a little practical experience in growing plants and raising animals. The General figures that city sprouts are as frustrated as bees on wax flowers. All that concrete keeps them from getting close to the good earth. Sounds as though the General must be an old country boy himself. He surely is proving that you can take the boy out of the country, but you can't vice versa.

Tomorrow I leave to go to San Francisco to see the new Ford. It certainly must be a dream car from what I hear but I will tell you just enuf to whet your appetite for a sight of it.

We now expect to have the first showing of the all new Ford on June 18th—that is barring strikes, material shortages or some other monkey wrench in the wheels of progress.

A Cleveland pigeon that was entered in a 100-mile race nine years ago, just returned. Its owner has no idea where it's been. Apparently it's no stooled pigeon. We're no stooled pigeons either, but we'd like to flip you off to the top service you get at HALBROOK MOTORS, Minneapolis and Bond. See us for repairs or service. No job too big or too small. All we want to do is keep you satisfied and we have the men and equipment to do it. Our many years of experience is your guarantee of better service. Phone: 680. "That Friendly Ford Dealer."

Steals 2 Sticks of Gum; Gets 2-Year Jail Term

Salem, Ore., May 21 (AP)—Walter P. Brokus, a transient, was sentenced to serve two years in Oregon state prison for stealing two sticks of chewing gum.

Brokus was arrested May 5 while he was burglarizing a grocery company warehouse. Judge George R. Duncan sentenced him yesterday. The gum was the only loot he had taken.

Many roses are grafted on stocks of other stronger-growing varieties; these stocks often send up sprouts which should be removed before they kill out the preferred variety.
