Brand Inspection Work Is Resumed

Salem, Aug. 21 (Special)—Livestock brand inspections have just been resumed throughout Central Oregon, according to word from M. E. Knickerbocker, chief of the division of animal industry of the state department of agriculture at Salem.

He announced the following deputy livestock brand inspectors have been appointed and are now serving Central Oregon.

Bend area—County sheriff, C. L. McCauley, Bend.
Redmond area—C. S. McKelvey of Redmond.
Prineville area—Lyn Nichols of Prineville.

Madras-Culver area—C. A. Harman of Culver.

Lack of funds caused suspension of all brand inspections on livestock movement on June 23. Resumption of this service and the introduction of inspection at slaughter-houses have been made possible by an emergency appropriation granted earlier this month by the state emergency board following a conference with livestock leaders and department officials. With selection of the deputy inspectors for Central Oregon, virtually all districts in the brand inspection area of the state now have one or more livestock brand inspectors accessible for this service.

1901 Car Tangles With Log Truck
Willamina, Aug. 21 (AP)—A 1901 Locomobile and a 1940 International log truck tangled three miles west of here last night and, as could be expected, the log truck won.

Ralph Jacob Wortman, McMinville, was steering his 47-year-old steam driven Locomobile which was being towed by a car driven by his wife.

He was attempting to retrace the route from McMinnville to Tillamook when the steamer developed boiler trouble.

His wife pulled her car to the side of the road to let faster traffic by when the towline jerked and hurried the Locomobile into the path of the truck driven by Dolan G. Haggar, Grande Ronde.

Wortman was not injured, police said. He plans to rebuild the old car.

Titanium pigment, widely used in white paint, is now used in a new-type porcelain enamel which promises to give a beautiful finish and excellent durability.
