

Biggest Bomber Adds Transport To Many Feats

Fort Worth, Tex. (U)—The six-engined B-36, world's largest land-based bomber and one of the most highly praised ships in the air force, has added another performance possibility.

Little trucks resembling sawed-off wagon beds have increased the potentialities of the sky giant operating at the Carswell air force base here, so that it easily may be transformed into an air transport ship.

It can haul some 80,000 pounds of vital materials to front lines by using six of the little all-metal trucks, each capable of carrying around 14,000 pounds. The trucks fit into the big bomber's belly like a finger fits into a glove. Making things easier still, they can be hoisted intact through the bomb bay.

They are standard equipment when the B-36 is delivered by Consolidated-Vultee Aircraft Corp. A pair of them is aboard each time that Convair lets a B-36 go to work.

Possibilities Great

A typical load for the two cars would be the bomb racks, hoisting equipment and loose supplies needed by the B-36 at its operating bases. (While the B-36 can use the same length field as a B-29, maintenance equipment presents a difficult problem right now because of the tremendous size of the super-bomber.)

Convair officials point out that the trucks open wide the B-36's possibilities to supplement existing air cargo facilities when extreme range is required, or when very heavy loads or large equipment must be handled.

They add that the cargo carriers also allow the B-36 to take along substantial quantities of its own supplies. One truck could could hold spare parts needed for B-36 servicing at an overseas base, thereby expediting repair service and extending the range possibilities.

Israeli government refused to accept British protest against Israeli action of shooting down five British planes near Rafah (4), and top members of Britain's government met in emergency session to consider crisis brought about by this action.

Ashland Group Launches Recall

Ashland, Ore., Jan. 13 (U)—Petitions to recall three hold-over city councilmen appeared in Ashland today, along with the dropping of a city-wide poll to test sentiment in the current political battle between Mayor Tom Williams and the city council.

The Civic Betterment league recently initiated recall petitions after the council refused to approve Mayor Williams' appointments and reinstated City Attorney Briggs and Chief of Police C. C. Williams, whom the mayor had suspended.

Councilmen Daugherty, Nosler and Fischborne are named in the recall petitions. Dr. William Bracker, announcing withdrawal of a postcard poll of all Ashland voters, said the move would be delayed until after a decision of the circuit court in a suit by the city council asking clarification of the mayor's appointive and suspending powers. The council stated it would abide by the decision of the court.
