

Oregon's Winter Sports Season Gets in Swing

By Eldon Barrett
(United Press Sports Writer)

Salem, Feb. 1 (UP)—Oregon's winter sports season gets into full swing this month with more than 19 improved skiing areas being operated for the slats artists as well as the sitzmakers. Seventeen are in 13 national forests. One is at Crater Lake National park and another is on private lands near Siskiyou summit. There are many other ski slopes but only a few of these have towes, shelters or other accommodations.

Season Said Biggest

The state travel information department believes this season, now about two months along, will be the biggest yet for winter sports in Oregon.

The Mt. Hood vicinity is dotted with ski bowls and trails, all doing a thriving business. Seven are for public use. The best known is Timberline lodge area, 63 miles from Portland on the south slope.

Timberline attracts most of the Mt. Hood skiers, largely because it has a chair lift 5,000 feet long which rises 1,000 feet. Timberline also has three rope towes of lesser length.

Rope Towes Offered

Mulhorp ski area south of Government camp and Timberline offers rope towes of 1,200 and 300 feet in length as well as class A, B, and C jumping hills.

Tom-Dick bowl west of Government camp has a chair lift 3,500 feet long; Camp Windy hill north of the camp, two rope towes; the summit area east of the camp, three towes, and the Tilly Jane area on the north slope, one tow and a snow cat.

Playground Popular

A new but popular winter playground is at Anthony lakes in the Whitman National forest near Baker, flood lights permit night skiing and three rope towes assist enthusiasts of the hickory sticks.

Two pioneer snow areas near Bend are the Skyliners' Ski club playground 10 miles west of the central Oregon city and Hoodoo ski bowl near Santiam pass. Hoodoo also is a favorite spot for many Willamette valley skiers.

Four rope towes capable of handling 3,000 skiers per hour are in operation at Hoodoo. There also is a ski jump for leaps up to 1,000 feet.

Excellent Skiing Offered

Bachelor butte, 25 miles from Bend on Century drive, offers excellent skiing, often until as late as mid-July.

Crater lake skiing this year is on a smaller scale than last year, the department said. No lodgings are available at the crater's rim.

JACK in the CORNER

With the co-axial cable creeping across the country and the possibility of using high flying planes or blimps for rebroadcasting stations, it looks as though nationwide television is closer than a giant's eyes. One commentator claims that soon you'll be having your morning paper right on a television screen on the table. You won't even have to turn the pages. That sounds more convenient than a buckle on a safety belt. Of course when the comes come on you'll probably have the kids hanging all over you like a bunch of grapes. But at least you'll be able to keep your morning paper out of the coffee.

A lot of dealers from the deep south were at the N. A. D. A. meeting in San Francisco, so many in fact that I came back with a southern accent.

It was a real treat to talk to dealers from all over the country and particularly illuminating to find that they were kicking about the weather in their section of the country just as we were, and it was just as unusual according to them as our weather has been. So, I guess it is unusual.

A Chattanooga paper carried a bakery advertisement that was scented with cinnamon . . . but dogs chewed the papers to pieces. That's one way to have your business go to the dogs. To keep your car from going to the bow-wow, bring it in for repairs to HALBROOK MOTORS, Minnesota and Bond.

Sport Parade

By Oscar Fraley
(United Press Sports Writer)

New York, Feb. 1 (UP)—Fearless Fraley's facts and figures:

Elmer (Violent) Ray, the former alligator wrestler from Hastings, Fla., is crowding back into the heavyweight picture today as a result of an even Stephen six-round exhibition with Joe Louis in which they shook each other continually with the 14-ounce pillows.

"Somebody would have dropped if they had been six-ounce gloves," said John Roxborough, one of Louis' retinue. "Ray should figure as a contender if he gets by either Charles or Lee Savold."

The champ had the range with his left and Elmer, thinking it over afterwards, pronounced it "awful good, but once you gets the mood of it, it ain't too much bother." Louis' reaction was to the point.

"Got to respect Ray," he said. "Dangerous." Welcome back to the elimination, Elmo. . . .

Clarence Picou, the jockey sensation, is proving that he was no flash in the pan last year. The kid won 280 races to finish second to champion Johnny Longden's leading 319 victories. And, two weeks ago, Clarence has had since losing his apprentice bud, two days in which he was at least a double winner . . . and just think, there are five more at home like him. . . .

Bernie Kooser of the Ames, Ia., Tribune weighs into support the suggestion of old Fearless that football statisticians keep account of tackles made by individual players. Bernie was ahead of the parade (Sport Parade, that is) because he tried it out last fall with great interest resulting. . . .

There was a time when people thought the horseless buggy would put old Dobbin completely out of business. Then people started making money with race horses and currently they are racing within the city limits as well as many aged farms. . . .

For instance, the jockey club's bureau of vital statistics, the registration office, recorded a total of 8,200 thoroughbreds last year. And it's going up, with 9,000 or more thoroughbred foals expected to arrive this spring. . . .

Making some sense out of those exasperating football ties, or at least trying to, the American pro football association at its annual meeting next week will try to vote through sudden death overtime periods. . . . Hockey, too, should get wise that customers want a decision. . . .

Indiana football guard, is learning his wrestling the hard way. In a recent match he was having trouble pinning his rival when a fraternity brother on the sidelines suggested a half nelson. . . .

"What's a half nelson?" Wally grunted, holding his foe steady. The frat brother demonstrated on a nearby pledge as Wally watched. Then he used it to pin his opponent . . . proving, no doubt, the value of a college education.

Bill Tilden Held On Morals Charge

Los Angeles, Feb. 1 (UP)—William (Big Bill) Tilden, balding 55-year-old former tennis champion, was in county jail today on charges of contributing to the delinquency of a minor and violating probation.

Deputy District Attorney William L. Ritz issued warrants containing the charges on the basis of a report by Santa Monica, Cal., policeman L. H. Brackett. The officer said a 17-year-old boy complained that a man he identified as Tilden made improper advances to him.

"It must be case of mistaken identity," said Tilden.

The tall, slender tennis star is on five years' probation on a morals conviction for which he served seven months in a prison camp. Police said they had found him in a parked car with a 14-year-old boy.

Middleweight Bout Possibility

New York, Feb. 1 (UP)—A title bout between middleweight champion Marcel Cerdan of France and Tony Zale of Gary, Ind., in June was a distinct possibility today as the Tournament of Champions, Inc., began plans to bring about the return match.

Art Winch, Zale's trainer, said in Chicago yesterday that Zale, former middleweight champion, "wants a return match" with Cerdan. Winch added, however, that both he and Zale's manager, Sam Pian, were against any further bouts for their fighter.

Cerdan's American representative, Lew Burston, told the T. of C. that the champion was ready to fulfill "any contract he has" with that organization, if Zale's handlers convince him he ought to retire, the T. of C. will submit names of other logical contenders to Burston.

Cerdan took the title from Zale last September. Contracts for that fight gave Zale the option of a return bout if he lost his title.

OSC Graduate Signs at Montana

Missoula, Mont., Feb. 1 (UP)—Clyde W. (Mac) Hubbard, former head coach and director of athletics at Denver university, today was named director of athletics at Montana State university.

Hubbard succeeds Douglas A. Fosenden, who resigned as director and head football coach. However, Hubbard will have no coaching duties.

A graduate of Oregon State, Hubbard was graduate manager of athletics there for a while. He later became head football coach and director of athletics at the College of Puget Sound, leaving that job to go to the San Francisco Olympic club.

He was with Denver from 1939 to 1948 except for a period in the army air corps during the war.

Lewis and Clark Win Over EOC

Portland, Feb. 1 (UP)—Lewis and Clark college basketball team defeated Eastern Oregon College of Education quintet 66 to 65 here last night.

The score was tied at 62-all with 3 1/2 minutes playing time remaining when Bob Pollard, Pioneer center, dropped in two free throws and Dean Sempert, L & C forward, hit a field goal to give the Pioneers a 65 to 62 edge.

Al Nolan, Eastern Oregon guard, sank a free throw and Eldon Lilly, forward, caged a field goal to bring EOC to within one point of a tie but Lewis and Clark held onto the ball in the final 30 seconds to ease out a victory.

Nolan and Guard Al Downey of Lewis and Clark tied for high individual scoring honors with 18 points each. Halftime score favored Lewis and Clark 37 to 35.
