

New Type Radio Show Projected At Redmond

"Stipe Fun Show," a 15-minute program of informal talks, gags, and give-aways, with audience participation, will be presented over KBND every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 2:45 p.m., beginning next week, under the sponsorship of the Stipe-Redmond Furniture store.

For each broadcast specific topics such as "Should husbands help their wives with the housework?" will be opened for discussion to members of the store audience. Also participants will be asked to relate to the radio listeners their most embarrassing moments, secret ambitions and greatest surprises.

No Rehearsals

The commercials are another feature of the program. For these, Ed Hamm, store manager and program emcee, will request some member of the audience to pick out a specific item of furniture in the store and attempt to make a sale to him. He plans to ask the questions and make the remarks of a typical customer listening to a sales talk. Hamm, who has never before spoken into a radio mike or acted as master of ceremonies on a show, admits that he will be as much an amateur on the program as any of the participants might be. He added that the program would be conducted informally and with no script.

One prize each broadcast day will be awarded to a radio listener tuned in on the program. Phone calls will be placed in the course of the show to determine the winners.

The program will be broadcast directly from the Stipe-Redmond furniture store. Plans have been made to seat approximately 20 persons at the store studio. Because of the limited seating capacity persons desiring to attend the show will have to make reservations in advance either by writing or obtaining them in person at the store.
