

Snow May Delay Crater Lake Road Opening

Salem, May 12 (AP)—A heavy snow pack may delay opening of the rim drive around Crater lake this year and opening of the east and north entrances, the Oregon state highway commission travel information department has been informed by the national park service offices at Medford.

West and south entrances to the park, however, are now in excellent condition, and so is the route to the rim, with no ice or snow on the pavement, the travel department was advised. Snow depths are now gradually decreasing up to eight inches a day. Indications are that Annie Springs campground at the junction of the south and west roads will be in use much earlier than the rim campground. The latter is more than 1,000 feet higher, and the snow accordingly is deeper.

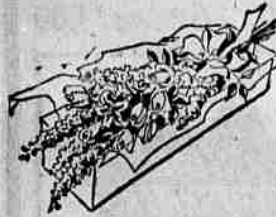

Lodge accommodations are slated to be available June 15. Sleeping cabins also will be opened for the season on that date. The rim campground will not be ready. Annie Springs is expected to open June 15 and will serve camping needs, park officials said. Bus service is to begin from Medford, Grants Pass and Klamath Falls June 15.

Superintendent E. P. Leavitt of Crater Lake national park said probable opening dates of the north and east entrance and rim roads would be announced as soon as possible.

Limited services will be available at the Oregon Caves national monument May 15, with all facilities in complete operation May 29, the travel information department said. The park service announced it is enlarging the parking area near the caves entrance.

No advance dates have yet been set for opening of the Mt. Hood loop and McKenzie highways, with snow depths governing clearance of highways for traffic. All other trans-Cascade highways now are open.

Several summer resorts in the uplands already are in operation, with all establishments ready for guests in June. Coast resorts, lodges and such, the department pointed out, are open throughout the year.

Fill-in Job Finally Concluded After 57 Years

Lead, S.D. (AP)—E. M. Ryan has retired after "filling-in" for another man for 57 years and seven months at the Homestake gold mine.

During the early days, whenever a miner wanted a day off, he got another man to take his place.

One day in 1891, Ryan recalled, he was asked to fill-in for another man for a day.

"I said I would, and while on the job next day, the foreman asked me whom I was working for. I said, 'Albert Knobb.' Thereupon, the foreman said, 'You had better come out tomorrow, and on second thought, you better continue coming out until Nobb gets back.'"

"Well, Nobb hasn't returned yet, nearly 58 years later, and I've been coming out every shift since."

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

How Would You Say It?

Curley Lawson's cousin from back East and a few of us got talking when he was here visiting, and I couldn't help noticing how different he said things.

For instance, he said, "Lifting that 200-pound bag of cement almost killed me." "You mean sack of cement?" asks Curley. (That's the way we'd say it.) "No," interrupts young Elliott who'd spent a lot of time down South. "He means a 'poke of see-ment.'"

It was good for a chuckle, anyway. Bag, sack or poke—we knew what he was trying to say. It just depends on where you are in the U. S., which way sounds right.

From where I sit, whenever we criticize someone for sounding funny to us, we ought to think how we sound to them. It's the same as choosing your liquid refreshment. I'm accustomed to a moderate glass of beer—you may like ginger ale—but who's to say the other's wrong? I'd say we're both right!
