Demand for Geiger Counters Heavy in Northwest Area

By Art Riddle
(Special Staff Correspondent)
Spokane, Wash. (UP)—One of the post-war world's most fascinating products, the Geiger counter, has been selling faster than a Boston bannet in the northwest this year.

Lucas E. Shanks, 26, is one of the half-dozen dealers handling Geiger counters in the northwest. He reports that anyone, from an old prospector to the city's wealthiest physician, is apt to step into his 10 by 10 shop to buy the device.

A product of the atom age, the counter is used to detect the presence of radioactive material, especially uranium. Portable units such as Shanks sell weigh about four pounds.

They are simple in appearance, consisting outwardly of a plain metal box, a pair of earphones and an aluminum cylinder, about the size of a flashlight, connected to the box by a two-foot cord, a Geiger-Mueller tube, sensitive to gamma rays.

Portable units range in price from $55 to $375, but Shanks said a trustworthy instrument is not likely to be sold for less than $100.

Shanks, a navy veteran who learned instrument work at the Hanford atomic plant near Richland, Wash., has sold about 85 counters in the year he's handled them. Only recently has he been able to get enough to keep up with the demand.

"Doctors and dentists seem to have a particular liking for the counters," Shanks said. "They take them along on vacations and get in a little uranium prospecting as well as hunting and fishing."

Others who have bought the device include engineers, mining companies, land owners, real estate men and old-time prospectors. "More than once an old duffer has shuffled into the shop looking as though he expected a handout," Shanks said. "But invariably it'll be a weather-beaten prospector, and he'll slap down a hundred dollar bill for a counter." Assaying Free

Shanks, who is nearly as proud of his two-year-old business as he is of his two-year-old son, also runs an impromptu assay office. He said eight or ten persons stop in each day carrying samples of ore. They want to know whether it's radioactive.

"I don't charge them anything to test it," Shanks said. "After all, there's only one chance in a million that any particular sample will be 'hot.'"

Shanks' shop originally dealt in air pressure gauges, thermometers and a myriad of other industrial meters. Shanks is glad he added the Geiger counter to his list.

He's looking forward to the day when the counter will take its place beside the thermos bottle and portable radio as standard equipment for vacationers and picnickers.

Soft Drinks Hit By Penny Tax

Eaton, Ga. (UP)—The city council devaluated the nickels and got a taste of the trouble Britain is having with the pound sterling.

The values of the nickels went down when the council upped the price of soft drinks by levying a penny tax. The bottling business promptly went to pot.

Some stores quite selling soda pop altogether to escape the ire of small fry customers.

Some stores absorbed the tax themselves to keep the drink at market value.

Other stores posted signs reading: "All five-cent drinks, six cents." A group of merchants circulated a petition for repeal of the tax. One bottling company refused to solicit business within the city limits. Owners of automatic dispensing machines that handle only five-cent coins were frustrated.

A vendor who tried placing a "tax box" at the side of the machine for collection of pennies remarked later: "You'd be surprised how little honor some people have when it comes to paying taxes."

The city council, however, shrugged off all the abuse and waited for reaction to the rest of its tax program, which included: Two and three cents on movie tickets.

Four dollars on all men between the ages of 18 and 80. Two dollars on dogs, regardless of age, size, color or breed.

Amputee Makes Corking Pitcher

St. Louis (UP)—A pitcher with two artificial legs is throwing a better screwball here than the major leaguers ever will see.

He is Clarence "Bud" Voellinger of East St. Louis who hasn't lost a game this year, and hasn't been scored upon.

Voellinger pitches in the cork ball league, which is somewhat unknown throughout the country. A corkball is about the size of a plum, the bat the player uses is a half size bigger than a broom stick.

The ball is made of cork with a horsehide cover. The curves a man can pitch with it and the skill required to hit it are beyond any standards used in baseball.

But Voellinger, 23, who had his legs torn off by a German land mine when he was in the infantry, is fast becoming the best corkball pitcher in the area.

Corkball is a great aid to handicapped players. It requires no running.

Teammates of Voellinger say that if he were in the majors and could throw curves with a baseball as he does with a corkball, Joe DiMaggio and Stan Musial could not even get a safe bunt.

Court Record Set Right by Oldster

Bloomington, Ill. (UP)—William O'Neal, 79, was called into court on charge that he twisted his 82-year-old sister's wrist and fractured it. He denied the charge. "It just isn't true," he said. Actually, he explained, it happened when he pushed her off the porch during an argument.

Actress Stabs Self in Abdomen

Hollywood, Nov. 21 (UP)—Sultry actress Jean Wallace, 27-year-old divorced wife of actor Franchot Tone, was recovering today after stabbing herself "just for laughs."

Dr. C. Landry Cooper said the wound in her abdomen was three-fourths of an inch wide and "several inches" deep. The former Earl Carroll show girl had nicked a large vein and several stitches were needed, he said.

The stabbing occurred yesterday after she spent Saturday at Tone's swank Bel-Air home visiting their two young sons. Tone has custody of the children by a pre-divorce agreement.

Miss Wallace's mother, Mrs. Mary Ingham, said she heard a scream shortly after her daughter arrived home. Rushing to the kitchen, she found her daughter holding a 16-inch butcher knife. She had suffered an abdominal wound.

No Reconciliation
Mrs. Ingham said she wrestled the knife away from her daughter, receiving a slight cut on one finger.

"I might as well finish it now," she quoted her daughter as saying.

"I just did it for laughs," the beautiful blonde told attendants at Presbyterian hospital, where she was taken after receiving emergency treatment at Georgia street receiving hospital.

"There is no plan for a reconciliation," he said. "I'm very sorry."

Miss Wallace divorced Tone more than a year ago in a Hollywood "friendly affair." Relatives told officers she had been despondent over the marriage failure. She eloped to Yuma, Ariz., with Tone in October 1941.

Men Leave Jeep To Rattlesnake

Bisbee, Ariz. (UP)—Ever have a live rattlesnake sit on your lap? A pair of Bisbee men, Sherman Williams and Dave Callahan, did.

They were driving in an open jeep when Williams, who was at the wheel, spotted a snake in the road. He headed for the reptile. Somehow, it flipped into the jeep as the wheels passed over it.

The snake, four and a half feet long, landed on the knees of the terrified motorists. Williams jammed on the brakes.

"The snake's tail was sticking straight up and rattling," he said. Both men jumped out. Williams said he managed to boot the snake onto the road as he jumped. After they killed it, they counted 11 rattles.
