Church School Pageant Set For Friday

Children of the Trinity Episcopal church school will take part in a Christmas pageant, "The Holy Night," by Florence Converse, Friday, Dec. 23, at 7:30 p. m. at the church. The pageant, with an old English setting, is patterned on the fourteenth century legend that on the night Jesus was born, animals were also to speak.

The play, last given in Bend in 1931, with Mrs. Phil Sturges in charge, is being directed by Mrs. Sterling Sorenson. In some cases, youngsters of the church school are the second generation to take part in the pageant.

Principal characters will include the following: Ann Mackey, Mary; Robert Young, Joseph; Ned Mackey, Gary Gentry and Dick Benold, leading shepherds; Robert Mullins, John Prichard and Billy Akin, wise men; Sally Nielsen, angel Gabriel; Paul Benold, Richard Hemingway, Craig Nielsen, Frederick Bates and Philip Young, animals at the manger scene. All other girls in the church school will portray angels, and the boys will appear as shepherds.

Assisting with the production are Mrs. K. E. Sawyer, organist; Mrs. C. L. McAllister, Mrs. Wilson George and Mrs. Allen Young, costumes; Bryce Mullins and W. R. Nance, properties, and Sterling Sorenson and K. E. Sawyer, lighting. H. W. Davy made the halos.

BOOKINGS HEAVY

Heavy bookings for Christmas air travel was reported by J. C. Sedell, station manager for United Air Lines here.

Bookings are particularly heavy over long distances which indicate the volume of long haul traffic apparently is due to the three day holiday. Extra sections have been set up to supplement United's 170 regular daily flights and others will be added as necessary, Sedell said.

All indications are that December will be the heaviest air cargo month in United's history with record volumes of airmail express and air freight being carried, Sedell reported.

DOG POISONED

Art Dahlgren, 655 East 10th street, reported to officers yesterday that his dog had been poisoned. The dog died, Dahlgren reported.

JACK in the CORNER

Well, "taint" long now until you can open a closet door or wardrobe drawer and not have someone call to you to keep out or not to look. The presents will all be distributed and you will have told your little white lies about "oh yes, it was just what I've always wanted." I say "white lie" because in your heart you wonder where in Heaven's name they got the idea you wanted that particular thing and further, you are not just sure what it is!

And then in January comes the hangover—well, it might as well be a hangover—because it is then that you realize just how bad the news is. That first-of-the-month-blues hangs heavy over your head. But remember—you will get the bills paid up, pay your income tax and then start all over again wondering what you will buy next Christmas.

It's a great old merry-go-round but everyone does love it. Of course, some people hit the jack-pot and I suppose that makes up for all those that have to tell those little white lies.

One of the beautiful things about the holidays is the illuminated house and yard decorations. The difficulty lies in that you don't know just what places are decorated and oftentimes one of the most attractively lighted places will be missed. I have thought that it would be a good idea for the newspaper to call attention to certain streets or certain houses so everyone would have a sort of guide list to follow. If they make an award for the best decorated house, of course, it gives you something to look for but it just seems to me that a suggested drive could be outlined and it would encourage more people to do something even though they weren't in any competition.

I have heard more duck and goose hunting stories after that lovely warm opening of the second part of the hunting season. I like duck but not that well. Any time I have to stand in snow up to my knees, shiver and shake with the cold and try to compete with 500 other hunters who are driving them higher into the sky every time they shoot—I will take up tiddly-winks as my major sport.

But speaking of those Christmas presents -- if you are stumped and want to give him or her a present that will give lasting satisfaction hurry down to Halbrook Motors and look over our accessory stock. There is a very complete stock to choose from, and you know the address—520 Bond Street, phone 680.
