WHO REMEMBERS "THE SCARLET TIDE"?

An article in the Oregon Journal's Sunday magazine recalls the fact that the first moving picture striking at communism was filmed here at Bend. "The Scarlet Tide" was the title and those of us who were around about 30 years ago remember the taking of the picture and the company of actors and actresses who participated.

Just what the plot was we cannot remember but we do recall that there was a knock down fight between two characters out in the timber and that there were interior scenes done in the home of H. E. Allen, then assistant manager in the Brooks-Scanlon office.

One prize boner was permitted to get into the picture. This was to leave the name of The Shevlin-Hixon Company on an engine that came down along the tracks by the power house pulling a train of logs. We forget the name of the company given in other parts of the picture but it was not Shevlin-Hixon.

This was a silent picture, of course. Even so if it could be resurrected and brought back for a showing we think it would draw a crowd. We are not sure but it might even go as the comedy on the nights it showed.

In a news story reporting developments in the field of elec-

In years to come, the engineers speculated, the traditional business convention may be outmoded. Its substitute may well be telephone television. Such a setup would allow across-the-desk conversations between men many miles apart. They would no longer need spend time and money traveling to conventions.

The reporter who wrote that, we should say, has never attended a convention.

A letter to the editor appearing in the Portland Oregonian offers the theory that cancer is spread by rats and suggests that it would be interesting to learn whether Bend, Prineville that it would be interesting to learn whether Bend, Prineville and Redmond are cancer free. Unfortunately not. Incidented 220 pounds of uranium oxide. 220 of the disease in these communities, while not unusually high, of the disease in these communities, while not unusually high, is high enough. There is no local proof in support of the correspondent's belief. We are happy at the absence of rats, however. Some day we may be rid of the other evil.

here last night when the municipal ice skating rink was opened. The flooding required in preparing the rink is one of the uses that is expressly forbidden in New York this winter. There water is a scarce luxury while in Bend, in the winter season at least, there is an abundance for all purposes.

December 22 — To-day we left this forbidding lake. Impassable rocky ridges barred our progress to the eastward, and I according-ly bore off towards the south, over an extensive sage plain. At a considerable distance ahead, and to the eastward, and I accordingly bore off towards the south, over an extensive sage plain. At a considerable distance ahead, and a little on our left, was a range of snowy mountains, and the country declined gradually towards the foot of a high and nearer ridge immediately before us, which presented the feature of black precipices, now becoming common to the country. On the summit of the ridge, snow was visible; and there being every indication of a stream at its base, we rode on until after dark, but were unable to reach it, and halted amounts of the ridge and responsible to the salve thickly over the patient's nose and "chest." He covered him lightly and resigned him to his fate.

"Would you believe it?" asked the neighbor. "The next morning the pig had quit wheezing the summit of the ridge, snow was visible; and there being every indication of a stream at its base, we rode on until after dark, but were unable to reach it, and halted among the sage bushes on the open plain, without either grass or water. The two Indiarubber bags had been filled with water in the morning, which afforded sufficient for the camp; and rain in the night formed pools, which relieved the thirst of the animals. Where we encamped on the bleak sandy plain, the Indians had made huts or circular enclosures, about four feet high and twelve feet broad, of arte-misia bushes. Whether these had been forts or houses, or what they had been doing in such a desert

Washington (NEA) - New testimony on possible wartime ship-ments of uranium salts from the ments of uranium saits from the U.S. to soviet Russia presents a tantalizing mystery. It will probably be impossible to find any medium who can contact the late Harry Hopkins in the spirit world as easily as the Russian embassy could get him on the wire in Washington.

could get him on the wire in Washington.

As disclosed by senior investigator Louis J. Russeil and exair force Maj. George Racey Jordan before the house un-American activities committee, two lend lease shipments of uranium salts were made by air through Great Falls, Mont., and Fairbanks, Alastra.

Assuming that the shipments were made as described, the big question is how much good they have the Russians.

One of the atomic secrets re-vealed at the end of the war concerned this fact that the Russians had requisitioned some uranium compounds through the lend-lease administration. There was con-siderable argument at the time

The decision was finally made to give the Russians a little ma-terial—not enough to do them any good—just enough to quiet mony now being disclosed, the necessary for an atomic explosion "is generally regarded as be-tween one and 100 kilograms." This is two to 220 pounds.

The Russians may therefore have thought they knew how much to ask for to make a bomb. But they may also have been a little mixed. little mixed up in their intelli-gence reports and their chemis-try. As the Smyth report also ex-plains, this critical mass of from two to 220 pounds of fissionable material would have to be sepa-rated from 140 times as much natural uranium. Dec. 21 — One of our neigh-bors has gone in for raising pigs on a large scale. He built them a new house, and hovers over Another interesting detail is that when the order was filled, only 200 pounds of uranium oxide were shipped, instead of the 220,

The 25 pounds of uranium met-al which the Russians asked for could have been used in expericould have been used in experi-ments on conversion into plu-tonium—the operation carried on at the Hanford, Wash., atomic energy plant. Whether it would have been enough to do the Rus-sians any good is beside the point, because there is no record this order was ever filled. But the Russians soon discov-ered their mistake in not asking.

But the Russians soon discovered their mistake in not asking for enough natural uranium saits to do them any good. On March 19, 1943, the requisitioned "several tons" of ranium nitrate and uranium oxide.

There wasn't that much available as by this time all 15 sun.
